Man Confesses Murder in Hotel

Police Find Ring Missing When Body Was Found

Arrest Made Early Today in Death of House Painter From Wisconsin

The killer of Charles J. Hines was under arrest early today, a police source disclosed at 1:45 a. m.

The prisoner confessed the crime, and the $1000 diamond ring, missing when the body was found in the Ambassador Hotel, was recovered, police reported.

The bound and bludgeoned body of the 48-year-old Madison, Wis., house painter was found yesterday between 8 and 8:15 a. m. in Room 604 by a maid, Mrs. Dorothy Kensler, 40, of 2118 P st. nw., while making a routine check of the sixth floor.

Hines, who had registered at the hotel Monday, had been bound and tied to the bed. The ring was missing, but his wallet, containing traveler's checks but no money, and his wrist watch were found on a nearby table.

News of the arrest followed information that police knew the killer's identity. A hotel detective, Harold Chandler, reported he saw several men in the room with the murdered man as late as 2:30 p.m. Tuesday. He is reported to have recognized one of the men.

Late yesterday it was known that police were questioning a young girl and four men in connection with the case. How much light this threw on the crime was not made known immediately.

Search for Fingerprints

The entire room was examined for fingerprints. Police removed all bottles and glasses found in the room. Fingerprints taken from the drinking utensils were known to have been matched with a set taken from police files.

Wife of the dead man, Mrs. Laura Hines, who arrived by air last night from Madison, was met at National Airport by Lieut. John B. Layton of the special investigation squad, and Detective Sergt. Walter Vogelsang of the homicide squad. She was taken to headquarters for a police interview.

Hines had stopped off in Washington on his way home to Madison after visiting his son, George Hines, a marine stationed at Camp LeJeune, N. C.

When police arrived on the scene they found the victim, clad only in underwear, lying on the bed. He was turned slightly to the right. His head was covered with blood, which had dripped over the bed and onto the floor.

A rolled-up sheet covered his mouth and was tied tightly

New England Men Strongest; Those From Here Are Weakest

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A two-year survey conducted for the Army by Harvard University has produced arresting findings regarding the relationship between a man's body type and his birthplace, education, religion and marital status.

After photographing and measuring 105,000 soldiers and 9000 Wacs and analyzing the results, Harvard's department of anthropology reported:

New England—not Texas or Oklahoma—has the highest proportion of muscular men. Immigrants and men from the Mountain States and the Pacific Coast rank ahead of those from the Southwest. The East North Central States are "unexpectedly high in less muscular types."

In general, "Protestants tend to thinness and poor muscularity, . . . Catholics are heavy and muscular or light and muscular, (and) Jews are notably plump and obese."

The largest assortment of thin and weak, or plump and weak, men come from the South Atlantic region—the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, the Carolinas and Florida.

There are fewer Irishmen with big muscles than any other national extraction. Men whose forbears were from the Near East or Mediterranean rank first in body power.

College trained men "tend to fatter and less muscular types," while those with grade school educations outstrip both high school graduates and illiterates where muscle is concerned.

New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have the highest concentration of fat men.

"All fat and very fat body types and all thin and submedium fat men of the better muscular developments tend to be married more than once. Conversely, the unmarried men tend toward the leaner and less muscular types," the report said.

The Harvard report, made available by the Office of the Quartermaster General of the Army, is part of a larger anthropometric survey being conducted by Dr. Francis R. Randall of that office.

Dr. Earnest A. Hooten of Harvard headed a staff of anthopologists, analysts, statisticians and business machine operators making the investigation. Hooten is the man who satisfied complaints of patrons of the Boston & Maine Railroad by measuring some 50,000 of them and designing a coach seat suited to the New England posterior.

Aim of the survey was to improve the fit of Army uniforms and eliminate waste by evolving a

China Army Reported Out Of Red Trap

Nanking, Dec. 8 (AP).—The 110,000-man Twelfth Army Group—desperately needed to defend Nanking—was reported to have broken out of a Communist trap which held it fast for two weeks on the Suchow front.

There also were contradictory reports over whether the bigger Suchow garrison of 250,000 men still is trapped, as the Communists insist. A front-line dispatch said this force again is moving south against "some resistance."

A big break for the government in the battle to save Nanking was the break in the weather.

Air Force Active

Clear skies loosed the air force bombers and fighters—the government's best weapon—for a storm of raids of the type which saved Suchow when the Reds first assaulted that bastion in November.

The planes were grounded by wintry weather while the Communists captured Suchow, 211 miles northwest of Nanking, and wove a net around the Twelfth Army Group and the withdrawing Suchow garrison.

Associated Press Correspondent Harold Milks in a dispatch from the front quoted military forces as saying the Twelfth Army Group broke free and joined up yesterday with the Sixth Army Group from the south near Kuchen, about 130 miles northwest of Nanking.

Milks wrote from Pengpu, headquarters for the new Hwai River line. Pengpu is 25 miles south of Kuchen.

Milks said Pengpu anxiously awaited confirmation from the field of the junction. Gen. Liu Chih, commander-in-chief of east China forces, was believed to have gone north to meet Gen. Huang Wei, commander of the Twelfth Army Group.

Fell Into Trap

The Twelfth Army Group was brought up from Hankow more than two weeks ago in an effort to save the situation around Suchow.

It promptly fell into a trap set by wily Gen. Liu Po-cheng, commander of the Communist armies of central China, south of Suhsien, which is about 30 miles northwest of Kuchen.

In support of the junction account, Milks said there was confirmation that the Sixth Army Group had recaptured Kuchen.

Gen. Chen Yi's east China Communist armies had left only light holding forces to face the Sixth Group along the Hwai while the rest turned north to meet the Suchow garrison.

The garrison is made up of the Second, Thirteenth and Sixteenth Army Groups. Top-heavy with rear echelon personnel, the garrison has an estimated 110,000 combat troops.

Blocking their path is more than twice that number of Gen. Chen's east China veterans.

Milks said headquarters officials at Pengpu were ignorant of the Communist claims of having encircled this force west of Suchow.

On the contrary, they said the last account from the air force was that leading units had been sighted west of Suhsien, about 30 miles from the point where the Twelfth Army Group was first trapped.

(This would put the units about 20 miles south of where the Communists say the three groups are encircled.

(A Communist broadcast asserted 30,000 troops from the garrison now have been killed, wounded or captured.)

Hope Dims For Better Meat Supply

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Don't look forward to a lot more meat, or cheaper meat, next year than you have had recently, Department of Agriculture experts warn.

Like many other forecasts early this fall, the prediction that the enormous corn crop would bring an immediate increase in meat raising appears to be dimming.

Pork, beef, mutton, milk and dairy output lags despite the record feed supply and the favorable feeding ratios for converting corn into meat and other animal supplies.

The reason is simple. With by far the largest corn crop in history, the second largest wheat crop, and with oats and other grains above average, the prices of those commodities have gone down.

Most forecasters jumped to the conclusion that with cheaper feed, farmers would turn to feeding. But instead, it seems that the average farmer is afraid that livestock prices will follow grain prices down—which, in fact, they have moderately. The result is that farmers have continued to sell what livestock they had at present prices, and have been hesitant to increase their livestock numbers.

Takes Months to Make Beef

The best of our beef comes from the Midwest feed lots. The farmers buy feeders—young steers from the range lands—and turn them into the feed lots, where they rapidly put on weight through intensive corn fattening. It is a four to seven months' job.

A year ago, when the corn crop was the shortest in years and corn was high, the Midwest feeders cut their feeding operations about 25 per cent below normal. That brought a reduction of about 10 per cent in the beef supply.

This year, with cheaper corn, it was expected most of this reduction would be replaced. This would promise an increase in the beef supply within a few months. But the expectation was not fulfilled. Up to November 1 the increase in feeding was not more than 2 or 3 per cent above last year. This was slightly stepped up in November, but it still will not go much above 5 per cent above last year—only a small part of last year's reduction from normal.

Lamb Feeding at 20-Year Low

In its most recent statement on cattle and lamb feeding the Department of Agriculture reported:

"Cattle feeding this winter will equal or slightly surpass that of last year, according to recent indications.

"Lamb feeding will be the smallest in 20 years."

It isn't difficult to see the cattle feeders' attitude. Suppose he buys a 600-pound steer and pays the present high prices for that 600 pounds. After six months' feeding the steer puts on 400 pounds. He is afraid that in that six months cattle prices may be down so that what he makes on the extra meat he has put on the animal may not equal the loss he will have to take on the original 600 pounds he bought.

The hog raiser is in about the same boat. He is not convinced that present price levels will continue. Hog prices are down from 20 to 25 per cent from their most recent high. Although the present price relationship between corn and hogs makes hog haising profitable at present prices, farmers are wondering what the price may be

Open Row Breaks Out With Justice Dept. at Spy Probers' Session

Donald Hiss Called By Grand Jury; Mrs. Alger Hiss May Appear Today

New York, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—The grand jury investigating a reported Communist spy network called in the younger brother of Alger Hiss today as it sought to reach a "final solution" before it expires December 15.

Donald Hiss, in the State Department for seven years, was in a parade of witnesses before the grand jury, which held both morning and afternoon sessions for the first time since it reconvened to hear new evidence three days ago.

Whittaker Chambers, confessed former courier of the spy ring, and Alger Hiss, who flatly denies that he was a Communist cohort of Chambers, were on hand again, along with a Communist newsman and an unidentified brunette. Mrs. Alger Hiss and Elizabeth Bentley, an admitted courier for a wartime Communist espionage group, are slated to join the cast of witnesses, perhaps tomorrow.

No Comment on Progress

When the jury adjourned after five and one-half hours, Thomas J. Donegan, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, revealed that there would be "more witnesses" tomorrow. He refused to say who had testified or what progress the jury is making. To all questions he answered simply, "no comment."

Chambers, who has charged that Alger Hiss removed secret papers from the State Department while an official there, revised the date that he broke his Communist connections.

"Originally I thought I left the Communist Party about the end of 1937," he told reporters who cornered him in a corridor outside the grand jury room. "But in developing the narrative before the committee (the House Committee on Un-American Activities) it became clear that I left in 1938. I think it was about the second week of April, 1938."

The microfilms found in a pumpkin on Chambers' farm depicted some 200 stolen Government papers dated 1937 and 1938. Chambers now a senior editor for Time magazine, led two House committee investigators to the hollowed-out pumpkin on the night of December 2.

The newsman called by the grand jury was identified as David Carpenter of Nyack, N. Y., a copy reader for the Daily Worker, New York Communist newspaper. Carpenter's attorney, Sol H. Cohn, said his client was served with a subpena at his home this morning.

A handsome, smartly dressed brunette, about 35 years old, was escorted from the jury room and then back in again by two FBI men. The woman, who work a black tailored suit and a black hat, did not identify herself.

"I'm just part of the scenery," she said with a smile.

Newsmen Kept Off

Some of the witnesses were known to have entered the jury anteroom, where they waited to be called to testify, by a back stairway barred to newsmen.

Donald Hiss said Mrs. Alger Hiss was not to his knowledge on hand for questioning.

Chambers, in testimony made public Monday by the House committee, charged that Mrs. Alger Hiss typed copies of "restricted" Government papers which her husband stole from the State Department for delivery through Chambers to a Russian agent.

Airlift Hauls Near-Record 6133 Tons

Berlin, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—The United States and British air forces brought Berlin 6133 tons of food, coal and key supplies today, second highest total.

Near-perfect weather enabled the Allied airmen to make 748 flights in the 24 hours ended at noon. Throughout the rest of the day they roared over the city in promise of another near-record day for the 24 hours ending at noon Thursday.

Today's airlift was surpassed by that on Air Force Day in September, when the Allied air forces brought in 6987 tons. But that was a special show. Today it was business flying.

Soviet Stops Mail Exchange

The Russians stopped mail service between the eastern and western parts of the city in their first reprisal against Germans for repudiating communism in Sunday's municipal election in the United States, British and French sectors.

Postoffice officials in the Russian sector gave notice to the western sector postoffice department that mail would no longer be exchanged between the two parts of the city.

Presumably Germans who live in the western sectors will have to go to the Soviet sector to post letters to persons there, and will have to call at Soviet-sector postoffices for mail addressed to them by Germans under Russian rule.

Force Party Head to Quit

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States commander in chief, said in his monthly report to Washington that the Russians had taken "another step in the regimentation of the last opposition party in the Eastern zone" by forcing the resignation of Arthur Lieutenant as head of the Liberal Democratic Party and replacing him with Dr. Karl Hamann.

"Until now the party has tried to maintain a certain amount of independence and Lieutenant had distinguished himself by his courageous criticism of the seizures carried out in the Soviet zone," Clay said.

Clay said German industry in the Western occupation zones was being aided materially by German technicians who are fleeing from the Russian zone.

A high American source said that "many, many thousands" of such men had fled to the west. It was disclosed refugees from the Soviet zone number between 25,000 and 40,000 a month.

Nixon Sees Effort To Indict Chambers As Perjurer and Block Committee

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Open war last night broke out between the Justice Department and the House Un-American Activities Committee over what to do about former Communist Whittaker Chambers and his Red spy ring charges.

Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) charged in effect that the Justice Department is attempting to silence the committee inquiry by obtaining an indictment of Chambers on a perjury count in the New York Federal grand jury investigation.

Nixon told the committee in an unusual night session that for the Justice Department to take that line "would destroy their last chance to proceed against others . . . because their star witness would be an indicted perjurer."

Early Indictment Opposed

Contending that it takes a former Communist to catch a Communist, Nixon told the committee:

"I do not intend to entrust to the Justice Department and the present Administration . . . the responsibility of determining whether or not a technical crime has been committed (by Chambers)."

Nixon, backed up by most of the other committeemen, opened fire at the department, and opposed any early indictment of Chambers. Alexander M. Campbell, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division, reportedly requested the committee not to put Chambers on the stand again.

Campbell is said to have objected that further airing of the Chambers story by the committee might interfere with the grand jury investigation of his charges. The committee tentatively agreed not to recall the former Red courier to the stand until the grand jury has finished hearing him.

The row broke out into the open as the committee was doing a retake of former testimony by Isaac Don Levine, Norwalk, Conn., editor and writer, who first arranged Chambers' contact with top Government authorities after he (Chambers) broke with the Communist Party.

Adds to Earlier Story

Levine added to his earlier story by telling the committee Chambers told him of the existence of the purloined State Department documents in 1939. He said he believed Chambers would have produced the documents then had President Roosevelt agreed to hear his story. He said Chambers had since withheld the documents as a "club" over the Russians in case his family was threatened.

Nixon broke into Levine's account to produce direct testimony taken under oath from Chambers on this point in New York last Monday and then let fly at the Justice Department.

"The indication is that Chambers will certainly be indicted for perjury," said Nixon. "Indications are also that he will be indicted for perjury probably before any of the other people involved in this conspiracy are indicted."

He said the Justice Department "has made it very clear" that it does not want the committee to hear any witnesses scheduled to go before the Federal Grand Jury and "has indicated they want this committe to drop its investigation."

'No Longer Danger,' He Says

Nixon said he held no brief for Chambers, but "he has confessed, he is in the open, he is no longer a danger to our security."

He argued that only through an unindicted Chambers can the department hope to bring to book those who "stole" the documents and passed them to him.

"Despite that fact," he repeated, "the Administration is trying to silence this committee."

The committee went into night session under an apparently air-tight agreement, forced by Representative F. Edward Hebert (D., La.), that no new names would be "leaked" to the public until the committee had learned who they were in executive session.

Levine was carefully enjoined not to mention any new names that may have been mentioned to him by Chambers without previously advising the committee.

Despite all the precautions, Representative Richard B. Vail (R., Ill.), spilled a new one into the Report on Eastern Europe

Eastern Reds Seek to Keep Grip While Winning People

(Second of Five Articles)

By Theodore H. White

Paris (ONA), Dec. 8—Not since the days of Lenin and the Bolshevik triumph in Russia has so small a group of men had power thrust so quickly into their hands as the present leaders of Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and their Communist neighbors.

The small top band of Communists in each state were, 10 years ago, members of a hunted minority. In Hungary they numbered 4000 or 5000, in Poland between 50,000 and 60,000, in Czechoslovakia perhaps 75,000. Today Hungarian and Polish Communists alike count over a million members, and in Czechoslovakia the party counts 2,500,000.

In all these states one comes across the old leaders, the prewar Communists, as a clan of international elite. They know each other intimately, some from the training ground of the Spanish civil war, others from years of exile in the west, most from the long, lonesome years in Moscow waiting to go home. Their kinship today rests not only on common experience but on common problems at home.

They know, to begin with, that they have been leaders not of normal, bloody revolutions wrung from a resistant society and state; they have led revolutions that came as the fruit of Russian victory or, as in Czechoslovakia, were plucked rather easily from contending groups too confused and soft to resist. Their parties are pulpy with hundreds of thousands of career-seeking Johnny-Come-Latelies, and the peoples they govern have accepted them not in battle but by default. In each country, therefore, the leaders grapple with the same sheaf of political problems, wrestling with the same solutions.

Preservation of Party Purity Comes First

The first is the preservation of party purity. They are too shrewd to consider their bloated membership as a real measure of popularity or vast acceptance of the iron faith.

What they want are not voters and career seekers, but dynamic, self-consuming, dedicated Communist activists. Having by now almost finished wiping out and absorbing the rival Social-Democratic parties that threatened their claim on the workers' loyalty, they have begun a series of purges. In Hungary the purge is scheduled to last six months, in Poland it is to be over by the New Year. In Czechoslovakia it began in late

Basing Point Fight Flares, 'Lie' Passed

By the United Press

The running fight between Senator Homer E. Capehart (R., Ind.) and Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) over the basing point price systems flamed hotly yesterday.

Patman accused Capehart of being "in error," and Capehart replied that Patman was "a liar."

Patman Capehart

The squabble began last month, when Patman said the Republican Party, anticipating the election of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and continued GOP control of Congress, set up the Capehart Committee so antitrust law could be repealed on 30 days' notice.

Capehart answered Monday. He said the committee investigation was his own idea, and that he introduced the resolution authorizing it.

Patman issued a statement yesterday saying Capehart "is in error when he said that I attacked his committee."

"My attacks were against him, and were caused by his unprovoked, clear-sky attack on me, evidently designed for the purpose of beclouding the issue," he added.

"Senator Capehart's action in turning the big steel and cement trust dogs loose on me will in no way deter me in my efforts to expose what appears to be a con-

'Screwball' No Criminal Label, Court Rules in Upholding Suit

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 8 (AP).—Calling a man a "screwball" in Maryland is no worse than calling him a "souphead" in New Jersey, the Court of Appeals decided today.

"The word 'screwball' does not connote opprobrium or reprehensibility," Judge Edward S. Delaplaine said.

The court agreed with a Montgomery County jury that James T. Crouch of 9601 Riley pl., Silver Spring, claims adjuster for the Veterans Administration, was wronged when a neighbor charged him with disorderly conduct for use of the epithet.

Crouch sued Capt. Thomas J. Kennedy, Navy medical officer of 1203 Brookville rd., for "malicious prosecution" and won $1400 damages in the county court.

"There can be no denial that the word 'screwball' is an epithet of disparagement," Delaplaine allowed. "According to authorities on American slang, the word 'screwball' has many synonyms, such as blockhead, cabbage-head, dumbbell, galloot, goose, nutthead, mutton-head, sap, saphead and squarehead.

"The term may signify either (1) a peculiar or eccentric person, like crackbrain, crackpot, crank, queer duck, queer fish, nut, queer potato and queer specimen, or (2) a stupid or insane person, like batty, bughouse, crazy, boob, dippy, screwloose and soft-head."

But, he asserted, it's not criminal.

Federal Jury Frees Navy Chief Of Assault During Arrest Here

A 30-year-old Navy chief radioman, convicted in Municipal Court of drunk and disorderly conduct after he charged police brutally beat him, last night was acquitted by a Federal District Court jury of assaulting police when arrested.

He is Archibald I. Koester, of Falls Church, Va., who was arrested August 29 and filed a formal complaint with police two days later that he was beaten at the time of the arrest and later at the Seventh Precinct station.

Koester was found guilty of drunk and disorderly conduct October 13 by Judge Nadine Gallagher in Municipal Court. He was fined $10.

He was later indicted on charges of assaulting Pvt. Frederick L. Gibson and biting Gibson and Pvt. Frank F. Blessington the night of arrest.

The District Court jury deliberated from 3:20 p. m. until 9:10 p. m. yesterday before returning a verdict of not guilty. Koester afterward said his acquittal "merely underscores the raw deal I received at the hand of Judge Gallagher."

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut had charged the jury to find "beyond a reasonable doubt" that Koester was drunk or disorderly at the time of his arrest before considering conviction on the assault charges.

Defense Attorneys Emmett Leo Sheehan and Landon G. Dowdey had argued that Koester's behavior was prompted by "brutality" of police officers, causing him to become "disoriented" for some time after he was struck by police.

Koester alleged that he had gone up to a scout car at Wisconsin ave. and M st. nw. the night of his arrest to ask police a question. He said he was ordered to get inside the car. He said he questioned the order and was beaten over the head, suffering wounds that later required 15 stitches in his head.

Police said force was necessary to subdue Koester because he bit two policemen and struck and tried to choke one of them.

Pardoned of Murder, Man Dead Tired of 'Slander' From Grave

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 8 (U.P.).—Hamp Kendall, 71, today wrote Gov. Gregg Cherry protesting against an epitaph on a Caldwell County tombstone.

The epitaph he quoted read: "Lawrence Nelson, robbed and murdered by Hamp Kendall."

He complained: "No damned man that is innocent would stand under this slanderous tombstone scandal right where he is trying to make an honest living.

"It's your duty to do something about it as Governor of the State."

Kendall added that he already had asked authorities in Caldwell County to do something, but they declined.

The elderly man was sentenced to die after being convicted of Nelson's murder in 1906. The sentence later was commuted to life imprisonment. In 1917, after Kendall had been in prison for more than nine years, another man made a deathbed confession to Nelson's slaying.

Kendall was given a full pardon. Later he received $4300 compensation under a law authorizing the State to pay compensation of up to $500 a year for anyone unjustly imprisoned.

Cherry said he had replied to Kendall's letter that he was powerless to do anything about the epitaph. He said local authorities or relatives of the deceased would be the only parties who could take action.

Mellen, Onetime Wrestler, Still Quick To Come to Grips With Foe in Fight

J. Grenville Mellen, the Maritime Commissioner who yesterday dived into ECA's new Marshall Plan shipping policy with a verbal flying tackle, used to be a wrestler.

Though the 60-year-old commissioner gave up the tug-and-tussle sport more than a dozen years ago, he never has broken the habit of throwing everything he has into a fight. And when somebody does something that the 5-by-6, barrel-chested Mellen thinks is wrong, there's sure to be a fight.

GRENVILLE MELLEN
U. S. Maritime Commissioner

Commissioner Mellen, in effect, declared that a fight was on when ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman announced that he was canceling the policy of giving American vessels 50 per cent of the bulk cargoes shipped under the Marshall Plan.

Unable to block the change in policy, Mellen let go with a flying tackle in the press. In other words, having lost the first fall, Mellen has set out to win the match.

President Truman named Mellen, a cotton processor and warehouse operator at Gulfport, Miss., to the Maritime Commission in the summer of 1946. He was confirmed by the Senate within a week without a dissenting vote.

Within a few months, Mellen issued a dissenting opinion in the matter of some 100 surplus oil tankers. The matter came up during congressional hearings on the oil shortage. Four of the Maritime Commissioners voted that the commission was committed by earlier negotiations to sell the surplus tankers to foreign interests. Mellen insisted that according to the Ship Sales Act they had to be sold to American companies.

In the ensuing scrap, Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.), of the Senate Small Business Committee, lined up with Mellen, a Democrat. But Attorney General Tom Clark came up with a decision backing the majority of the commission.

Grenville Mellen was born and reared in New Orleans. His paternal grandfather, William Francis Mellen, had been dean of Tulane University Law School; his maternal grandfather, Dr. J. J. Castellanos, had been dean of the Duke Medical School. Grenville wavered between a career in medicine and law—nine consecutive paternal ancestors had been lawyers—then studied mechanical engineering at Tulane.

He never did become an engineer. Instead, his interests took him into cotton, statistics and finance. After several years on Wall Street, where he began as a runner and expanded into his own brokerage, Mellen returned to his native New Orleans and cotton trading. In 1927, he came to Washington to join the campaign for a Federal flood control program in the Mississippi Valley.

Mellen transferred his business activities to Gulfport, Miss., in 1932. He built and operated the Mississippi-Gulfport Compress & Warehouse, Inc. The compress squeezes 500-pound bales of cotton lint into smaller volume for shipment by rail or ship. His son, Delos, runs the plant while the father serves on the commission.

For 10 years Mellen was president of the Gulfport Port Commission. He is one of the initiators of the National Cotton Council of America, and served for many years as a national councilor to the United States Chamber of Commerce. He undertook a number of studies of the effects of our tariffs on international trade.

Commissioner Mellen was sworn in July 2, 1946, to serve out the term of Capt. Edward Macauley, who resigned. The term ends September 26, 1950. Father of four children, and three times a grandfather, he lives here with his wife at the Mayflower Hotel.

At 60, the silver-thatched, leathery-faced maritime commissioner looks a vigorous 45, and according to his friends, acts it. Two cauliflower ears give evidence of his wrestling days. The lines on his forehead crinkle and his bushy blond eyebrows arch high when he discusses an issue. He underlines his sentences with gesticulations, and for example, bangs a fist on the table. His deep-throated, growl-like voice grows huskier with the growing intensity of an argument.

A poor sleeper, Mellen often awakens during the night and jots down office business on a pad kept at hand for that purpose. Back home in Gulfport, he used to bowl and swim after he gave up wrestling for exercise, but here the closest he gets to exercise is an occasional rub at the Turkish bath. To relax, he runs over famous chess openings.

The maritime commissioner believes that America must have—to protect its foreign commerce in peace and to support the armed forces in war—not the largest merchant marine, but the "best, most compact, and most effective" fleet in the world.

ECA Shipping Fight May Go To President

President Truman probably will be asked to settle the dispute between the Maritime Commission and the Economic Cooperation Administration over the proportion of ECA cargoes to be carried in American ships.

Maritime Commission leaders drafted a strong protest to the President yesterday against ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman's decision to stop the fifty-fifty division of cargoes between American and foreign ships after January 1.

Commissioner Grenville Mellen called the decision "fantastic" and a "sell-out" of American shipping, and said it was based on a "distorted conception" of the act that set up the ECA.

He was backed by Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (CIO), who wired Hoffman that the decision was unfair and "short-sighted." Curran said Hoffman's action was "penny-wise and pound foolish," and predicted it would put 12,000 seamen on 300 American-flag vessels out of work.

The shipowners, represented in the National Federation of American Shipping, were equally indignant, and issued a statement saying Hoffman was "poorly advised and greatly misled."

But the ECA stuck to its guns. Hoffman was prepared to go before Congress in January and show that it had cost the American taxpayers at least 25 million dollars this year to send half of all ECA cargoes on American ships.

Hoffman got the assent of the so-called watchdog committee of Congress before announcing his new shipping policy in a letter to Senator H. Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), the committee chairman.

Last Friday, Hoffman put his problem before the committee. He pointed to the requirement of the act, which said that at least half of all ECA cargoes must be carried in American ships "to the extent such vessels are available at market rates."

He argued that the words "at market rates" entitled ECA to send less than half in American ships if American rates for bulk cargo were far out of line. The committee indicated that it agreed with his interpretation. The premium on American cargoes has been as high as $4.50 a ton recently.

ECA is not expected to ask the new Congress to get rid of the shipping provision, although the Administration fought it unsuccessfully when the present act was being written last winter.

The Administration is perfectly willing to leave the provision as it stands, so long as the escape clause remains. Hoffman said in his letter to Bridges that if Congress wanted to subsidize American shipping, it should do so directly, rather than expect the ECA to cut into funds appropriated for European recovery.

Maritime Commissioner Mellen's retort yesterday was this:

"If Mr. Hoffman is so interested in having shipping prices competitive, why doesn't he demand that American railroads charge the same rate for hauling Marshall Plan goods in this country as European railroads charge over there? In fact, why not, by the same line of thinking, reduce all United States prices to European levels?"

Another attack on ECA came yesterday from Representative Walter C. Ploeser (R., Mo.), who charged that "a few giant companies" were getting the lion's share of ECA orders. Ploeser, outgoing chairman of the House Small Business Committee, said former Undersecretary Will Clayton's firm of Anderson & Clayton and its subsidiaries got 71.2 per cent of all ECA's procurement authorizations for cotton exports in August.

In the same month of August, he said, about 296 firms got all the foreign aid business under ECA, and he urged the Department of Justice and the congressional watchdog committee to investigate.

Under the existing ECA Act of Congress, procurement of ECA orders is handled through private channels, except in the case of grain purchases. The Europeans themselves order supplies from American companies.

2-Million-Dollar Robbery Suspect

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
JOHN L. SULLIVAN, arrested in Newark, N. J., on a shoplifting charge involving a $23.50 electric shaver and a 50-cent book, has been identified by police there as a man wanted in Chicago in connection with a two-million-dollar safe-cracking in 1945. Police said the robbery, in a real estate office, was one of the biggest of the decade

3 Congressmen Urge Bar on Unions for Farm Workers

Three Congressmen recommended yesterday that labor unions be barred from organizing farm workers.

A House Labor Subcommittee headed by Representative Wint Smith (R., Kans.) said in a published deport:

"If permitted to continue with their farm organizing campaign, there is grave danger that labor organizations may destroy thousands of independent farmers within the near future."

The committee also recommended that Congress define carefully what it means by agricultural laborers so they will be sure to be excluded from coverage of the Taft-Hartley law. It said:

"While Congress has recognized the distinction between industrial labor and farm labor, and has tried to protect farmers against the organizational drives of labor leaders and the impossible burden of a 40-hour week, with the excessive penalties of time and a half for overtime, your committee believes that it is imperative that Congress spell out its definition of 'agricultural laborer' so as to assist the National Labor Relations Board in carrying out the intent of Congress.

The report also said the Justice Department "negligently failed to enforce" the Hobbs antiracketeering law. The committee said Congress intended the law to "put a stop to robbery and extrotion in commerce by labor unions." It said the law aims particularly to prevent unions from forcing farmers to hire extra drivers or pay extra fees to deliver farm produce to markets or warehouses.

Members of the committee signing the report in addition to Smith were Representatives Max Schwabe (R., Mo.) and Fisher (D., Tex.). The hearings on which the report was based were held from July 11 to September 5, 1947, in New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The committee also visited orchards, farms and dairies in Oregon, Washington and California.

The report cited New York vegetable markets as an example of the influence labor unions can have on farmers. It said New York commission merchants "completely surrendered the right to run their own business" under a contract with an AFL Teamsters Union.

The committee said Joseph G. Papa, president of the union, "admitted that he possessed the power arbitrarily to destroy the business of any commission merchant in the city of New York."

Vote Set Today On Store Pact

A "tentative" agreement was reached by union-management negotiators yesterday in a contract dispute involving some 70 AFL office workers at Goldenberg's Department Store, 7th and K sts. nw.

This was announced in a joint statement — prepared after five hours of contract talks—by W. Robert Probey, business manager of Office Employes Local No. 2, and Sol Greenberg, vice president of the store.

Both sides declined to divulge contents of the settlement until it is voted on by employes. A meeting to consider ratification has been set for 7 p.m. today at Hotel Annapolis.

Lovett Says Films Withheld 4 Days

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Undersecretary Robert A. Lovett said yesterday that the State Department had tried for four days to examine the documents found on Whittaker Chambers' farm, but had been refused by staff members of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Even now, Lovett told a press conference, the department has not yet had an opportunity to see all the documents in the Chambers case.

Last Friday, said Lovett, just after the microfilms were found in Chambers' pumpkin, the State Department tried to reach members of the Un-American Activities Committee with a request to see the documents. The committee staff replied, according to Lovett, that the documents could not be seen until Representative Richard M. Nixon had returned.

Lovett said it was natural to want to wait until committee members had come back to town. Nixon was then on his way to Panama by sea, and was taken off by an air-sea rescue plane of the Coast Guard, and flown to Washington.

Waited All Weekend

The State Department waited all weekend without being able to see the documents, although on Sunday afternoon committee investigators spent an hour and a half with former Undersecretary Sumner Welles, at his home at Oxon Hill, Md., showing him documents and seeking an evaluation of them.

Lovett was asked yesterday whether he thought it was proper to have shown these documents to Welles, a private citizen, before the department had been able to examine them. He said he had no comment.

On Monday morning, Lovett went on, the department sent two officials to see Nixon, to explain the department's desire to see the papers. Nixon said he would like to await Senator-elect Karl E. Mundt's return the following day.

Saw Grand Jury Papers

Meanwhile, Lovett said, the Department of Justice permitted the State Department to see the documents in the hands of the grand jury in New York. It was not until Tuesday that the committee showed Assistant Secretary John E. Peurifoy any of the documents found in the pumpkin.

Lovett said it would be hasty and ill-considered to accuse the State Department of being laggard in the Chambers case. When certain State Department documents were produced in the Alger Hiss-Chambers libel case in Baltimore, Lovett recalled, the Department of Justice at once sent an investigator to see them, and then got in touch with the State Department for help in identifying the papers.

Different Documents

The Undersecretary emphasized that these were merely the documents produced in the libel case, and not the bigger batch found on microfilm on Chambers' farm.

He said the codes used nowadays were entirely different from those of 10 or 11 years ago, and that cryptographic experts had assured him the department's coding today was as secure as it could possibly be.

This was a reference to the mechanical scrambling and unscrambling of messages, which enabled codes to be changed at short intervals. Wartime experience produced a general tightening of security in the Government, Lovett said, and present-day code work was much more secure as regards breakage and the removal of documents.

Of course, he added, the security of documents was always a matter of grave concern. He said Assistant Secretary Peurifoy had informed him, after seeing some of the documents on Tuesday, that possession of these messages would have facilitated breaking of the code used at the time they were written.

State Dept. Details Safety Precautions

By The Associated Press

State Department officials yesterday revealed five security measures taken in recent years:

1. The coding of messages to foreign embassies is now handled by machines rather than by hand, and machine codes are subject to quick changes and to complexity of uses which make it exiremely difficult if not impossible for an important message in code to be read by foreign agents.

2. Since early in the war, the State Department and other Government agencies have carried on campaigns against loose talk and careless handling of information. Clerks and stenographers are now believed to be as aware of the danger of "leaks" as top officials are supposed to have been.

3. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has "screened" State Department personnel, and the employes of other key agencies, from top to bottom. Officials said everybody working in the State Department has now been checked by the FBI for security.

4. Documents containing secret information are controlled by limited distribution among officials, and by a system of detailed checking on where each document is at any time. In addition, filing cabinets in all offices are regularly inspected and any important cabinet when open has a red sign warning the people responsible for it that it is open.

5. Messages which are sent and received in code are constantly checked by a cryptographic unit of the State Department to determine as far as possible whether the code has been broken, and the information discovered by persons who are not supposed to know it.

As far as security against Communists goes, officials added the point that Communist organizations in this country are now so well known to the Government that it would be difficult for them to place agents in Government positions in the face of existing security regulations.

Oxnam Attacks Anti-Red Unit

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., Dec. 8 (AP).—Methodist Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam today called the congressional Committee on Un-American Activities "un-American itself" for its attempt "to pin the Communist label on some churchmen and church grounds."

The New York minister told a reporter "the business of naming and calling men 'Communist' or any other label without first giving that person a chance to answer the accusation is in itself "un-American."

Bishop Oxnam said such "absurd charges" are "disguised efforts to silence men of the pulpit by threatening to call them Communists."

"We will not be silenced," Bishop Oxnam declared. "We plan to keep on talking and to make sure our ministers everywhere keep on talking."

The bishop is attending the annual meetings of the Board of Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church, which opened here yesterday.

Nixon, Mundt Believe Truman Should Act in Spy Inquiry

By Bert Andrews

A belief that President Truman should lift the entire Hiss-Chambers affair "out of politics" by asking for a thorough inquiry into the basic question—who stole secret documents from State Department files?—was voiced last night by two members of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

They were Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.) and Karl E. Mundt, Republican, Senator-elect from South Dakota.

President Truman, in all likelihood, will be asked at a press conference at 10:30 a. m. today about the feud involving Whittaker Chambers and Alger Hiss.

Chambers charges that Hiss was a Communist while a Federal employe in the mid-1930s and that in 1937 and 1938 Hiss fed him secret State Department papers. Hiss denies it.

Recent hot developments in the case make it possible that President Truman will not dismiss the whole investigation as a "red herring," as he has done in the past, but may take the position that the Hiss-Chambers controversy is transcended by the proven fact that confidential documents were stolen—and that the guilty should be hunted down, no matter who they may be.

record. He disclosed that for about 10 years the recently produced microfilms and confidential documents had been left by Chambers in the safe-keeping of a man named Nathan Levine (or Levin).

Vail dropped the name while reading from a statement Chambers gave a subcommittee in New York Monday night.

Later, Representative John McDowell (D., Pa.) told reporters the man who kept the documents for Chambers was a nephew of Mrs. Chambers. McDowell said he lived in Brooklyn and concealed the papers and films in an unused clothes chute in his home there.

Nixon earlier had read from the same sworn statement by Chambers, but skipped over the name.

Nixon's excerpts from the statement quoted Chambers as saying that he left Washington in 1939, after telling his story to Adolph Berle, then Assistant Secretary of State, convinced that a full investigation would be pushed."

When nothing happened, after two years, he said he resolved (1) to do all he could personally to "destroy the Communist conspiracy" but (2) to "do no more damage than necessary to the human elements involved."

He said he wanted to "give these people time to make the break" from communism.

Magazine Editor Isaac Levine, last night's only witness, and several members of the committee, hopped to the support of Nixon's warning against indictment of Chambers on perjury charges.

"An indictment of Chambers will negate and nullify most of the money spent on our Voice of America program," Levine testified.

The magazine editor said Chambers dealt with only about 10 per cent of the confidential papers Levine charged were "looted from 30 or 40 departments." He said papers and microfilms were shipped to Russia in suitcases "specially constructed in Moscow," through Mexico, Canada and Europe.

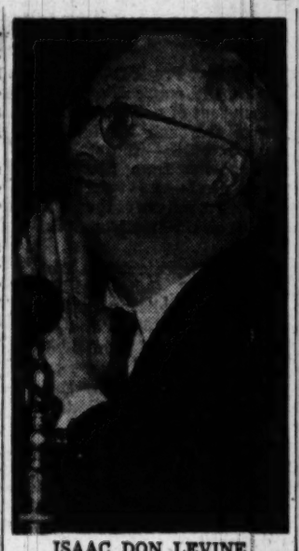
He told the committee he had personal knowledge of at least 10 Soviet spy rings operated in the United States and believes that number can be multiplied by 7.

McDowell said: "Some of us feel there were 132 in the United States."

Levine was one of 12 witnesses investigators decided to call after a four-hour closed committee session. Acting Chairman Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.), declined to name the other 11, but said 2 on the list are regarded as "suspects." He said neither of the two had been located last night. He described one as a photographer, believed to have had a hand in photographing some of the secret documents relayed to Chambers.

The committee meanwhile heard these two witnesses in closed session:

Miss Eunice A. Lincoln of the coordinator review staff of the State Department, who served as secretary for former Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre in 1937-38, when Alger Hiss was Sayre's assistant. Miss Lincoln declined to say what she told the committee. Mundt said she wasn't suspected of anything.



ISAAC DON LEVINE
Magazine Editor on Stand

David A. Salmon, former adviser to the State Department's division of cryptography. Salmon examined the purloined documents recently produced by Chambers, and said all shown him would have been transmitted in the department's most secret code. Mundt quoted him as saying: "Anyone receiving these documents would find them invaluable in breaking the code."

Assistant Secretary of State John E. Peurifoy meanwhile qualified a flat statement that codes then in use were broken through theft of the documents. Mundt said that Peurifoy called to correct the earlier statement.

"What he intended to say," said Mundt, "was that removal of the documents meant to him 'that possibly our codes were being read by foreign nations during the whole period.'"

The committee had planned to meet last night with Chambers, now a senior editor with Time magazine, but was told the Federal grand jury investigating the case in New York still required his presence.

During the four-hour closed session, the committee conferred with Alex M. Campbell, chief of the Justi . Department's criminal division, and George Morris Fay, United States attorney for the District of Columbia. Campbell said he had seen "some of the evidence," but nether would comment further.

NBC quoted Mundt as saying in a television broadcast that one of two missing witnesses sought by the committee has been located. Mundt later told newsmen there was a misunderstanding. He repeated that neither of the two "suspects" has been found.

Peace Endowment Board To Discuss Hiss Retention

New York, Dec. 8 (NYHT).—Whether Alger Hiss should remain as president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace will be the main order of business next Monday at the semiannual meeting of the organization's board of trustees, it was learned today.

Hiss, former State Department official accused by Whittaker Chambers of supplying secret Government documents for transmission to the Kremlin in 1937 and 1938, was elected president of the endowment in December 1946, and took office in February 1947. He succeeded the late Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler and was reelected last May for another year.

The board of trustees will meet at 10 a. m. Monday in the offices of the Carnegie Corporation of New York. The board has 28 members, including Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. John Foster Dulles, who is board chairman, is in Paris attending the United Nations Assembly.

Labor Unions Scold Business on Prices

Labor unions gave business a scolding yesterday for high-level prices and profits.

Spokesmen for the CIO and AFL said industry is piling up profits at the expense of the consumer and has a selfish policy that may bring on a business bust.

Ruttenberg

They gave their views to a Senate - House Economics Committee studying business' profits.

The committee showed quick interest in an AFL proposal that labor, business, farm and Government leaders get together in a conference to work out a voluntary program to halt inflation.

The AFL Executive Council recently called for such a conference, and AFL Economist Melson H. Cruikshank said it is hoped President Truman will call the meeting early next year.

Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) and Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) approved the idea.

O'Mahoney said he will press for such a conference because he believes it is possible for business and labor to get together on a long-range program.

"The old days of individualism in business are gone," O'Mahoney said. "We are in a new business era, and both business and labor know it. I believe there are large areas in which business and labor are in agreement.

"Certainly, their objectives are the same—a sound and prosperous economy. Such a conference could be helpful in beating the inflation problem."

Stanley H. Ruttenberg, CIO economist, said he foresees better cooperation in the future in the mass production industries. He added a "lot could be done" if business and labor try to agree on their long-range objectives.

Ruttenberg said business has raised prices above the level needed to cover higher costs, and is now "gouging the public."

"Corporations are engaged in protecting themselves against the future depression which they feel is inevitable," he said. ". . . (This represents) the self-interest, short-sighted, depression-producing thinking of American industry that must be altered if we are to avoid serious economic dislocations."

He said either prices should be cut or more of the profits distributed to stockholders and wage earners.

Figures Are Presented

He gave figures to support his claim that the increase in profits in recent years has outrun the increase in wages. Living costs, he said, have gone up 37 per cent since early 1945 while wages in the same period have increased only 13 per cent.

Cruikshank warned that labor must ask for more wages unless business acts to cut prices.

He contended that business profits are furnishing about 70 per cent of the new capital needed by industry for equipment, working capital, and so forth. In effect, he argued, this new capital is being taken from the consumer in higher prices.

Meat Supply Is Lagging

when their animals are ready for market.

The Government has asked for a 10 per cent increase in this fall's pig crop—or a crop of 34 million pigs, about three million above last year.

It also has asked an increase of 17 per cent in next spring's pig crop—or 60 million spring pigs—nine million above last year's 51 million.

On December 21 the results will be announced. Experts expect a slight increase in the fall crop, and little if any in farrowings for next spring's crop. Instead of the 10 per cent increase this fall they are predicting no more than 5 to 7 per cent. Instead of the 17 per cent in farrowings for next spring, they expect not more than 10 per cent, and some believe that the country will be lucky if it gets any at all.

Apparently many farmers:

1. He refuses to believe what economists have been saying about the bright business outlook for the coming year.

2. Think that the Government price support of $16.38 (average at Chicago) for hogs for the current season isn't high enough.

3. Think it's safer to seal their corn, take a Government loan of $1.44 a bushel on it, and not risk turning it into meat.

On the other hand prospects are that there will be increases in both eggs and poultry supplies—but whether sufficient to meet Government goals is a question.

The only prospect of increases in milk and dairy supplies seems to be in more output per animal, because of more abundant feed supplies, than in increases in herds.

The farmers just aren't taking a chance, as long as their profits from their grain crops are assured through Government price supports.

Fixed Prices for Meat, Food Crops Urged

Tom Campbell, the Montana "wheat king," yesterday urged fixed prices on food crops and meat, after a conference with President Truman at the White House.

Prices "are all too high," Campbell told reporters.

Hunter Sees First Deer, Bags It With First Shot

DDT-Resistant Strain of Flies Seen Developing

New Orleans, Dec. 8 (AP).—Keep your garbage can clean to help control flies instead of relying chiefly on new chemical killers which are not infallible, three United States Public Health Service researchers suggested today.

The three declared there is increasing evidence that strains of flies resistant to DDT and other new insecticides are developing.

Biologist V. E. Quarterman and W. C. Baker and J. A. Jensen, sanitation investigators of the health service's communicable disease center, Savannah, Ga., made the statements at the closing session of the American Society of Tropical Medicine's annual meeting.

Textron's Prober To Plug Tax 'Holes'

Boston, Dec. 8 (AP).—Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) closed a long inquiry into Textron and associated charitable trusts today by serving notice that he was going to try to plug "distinct loopholes" in tax laws to assure "humble" Americans "a fair deal."

The Senator lectured George J. Schoeneman, United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue and his chief counsel, Charles Oliphant, on a tax situation which he said troubled him.

He said it was a situation which made people wonder whether the Internal Revenue Bureau acted in cases of multimillion-dollar trusts as it would act "in the cases of humble people who are not important people, or people of large means."

Tobey's discourse came after Schoeneman and Oliphant answered subpenas to testify, but said they could answer little else because the commissioner was prohibited by law from "divulging information" on tax returns.

Schoeneman said he was sorry the law put him in the "unfortunate position" of being unable to answer, and said he would stand on the Internal Revenue Bureau's record of "efficiency and alertness."

Tobey said he did not intend personal criticism of Schoeneman, but was attacking what he called the bureau's delay in moving to collect taxes from three Textron-connected charitable trusts after it had ruled that the taxes were due.

The New Hampshire Senator announced his subcommittee would report its findings "some time in January." It started the investigation of Textron last September.

Textron is a holding company with five mills in the North and five in the South, which reported a 1947 business of 125 million dollars. Its president, Royal Little, settled the Nashua problem with a compromise plan which marked the mills there for continued operation for at least 10 years.

Private Loan Plan Aired at British Probe

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—A special tribunal probing talk of corruption among government officials heard a letter read today saying Marcus Wulkan, a New Yorker, offered to help Britain float a million-dollar loan from private interests in the United States.

Sidney Stanley, Polish-born promoter and central figure in the investigation, testified yesterday that he is Wulkan's brother.

Possibility of getting the loan, with the prospect of European Recovery Plan aid as security, was the topic of the letter, described as written by George Gibson, a governor of the Bank of England, to a British treasury official last February.

Attorney General Sir Hartley Shawcross read it today while questioning Gibson, forty-sixth witness in the 17-day-old inquiry.

spiracy to mislead and deceive the people against their interest on the basing point question."

Capehart answered promptly:

"I can only say that Mr. Patman is a liar, because I have said publicly at least a dozen times that I am opposed to the basing-point system as used in the cement and steel industry, and will not sponsor legislation to legalize it.

"And Mr. Patman's statement of November 26 was clearly an attack on our entire committee and he well knows it."

Truman to Act If Necessary in SP Rail Dispute

President Truman will move to postpone for at least 60 days a threatened strike on the Southern Pacific Railroad if the dispute is not settled before the December 15 walkout deadline.

Chairman Frank P. Douglass of the National Mediation Board, said yesterday Mr. Truman will appoint an emergency board to investigate the dispute. That would have the effect of heading off the strike for some two months.

Douglass said he had sent a mediator to San Francisco to try to revive stalemated negotiations between the railroad and the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen. The union, headed by David B. Robertson, represents 3000 employes.

Douglass was optimistic that a settlement could be reached before the strike deadline but he made it clear Mr. Truman will step in if one is not forthcoming.

Dalai Lama Seeking Iron Bridge for Tibet

Warsaw, Poland, Dec. 8 (U.P.)—The newspaper Wieczor reported today that the Dalai Lama, ruler of Tibet, wants to buy an iron bridge "to make my people happy."

The newspaper said a Polish firm had received a letter from the Lama, asking the price. The letter was written in Tibetan on heavy parchment and enclosed a bamboo tube. An English translation was included.

Officials of the export firm asked the Lama for "further details."

Douglass to Remain As Mediation Chairman

Chairman Frank P. Douglass of the National Mediation Board agreed yesterday to continue indefinitely in office at President Truman's request beyond the February 1 expiration of his three-year term.

Douglass visited the White House yesterday asking to be relieved of further duty but later told reporters that he had bowed to Mr. Truman's suggestion that he continue a while longer.

3 Czech Doctors Describe Atrocities, Horrors At Buchenwald Concentration Camp of Nazis

By the United Press

Three Czech doctors yesterday described the six years of horrors and atrocities they suffered with fellow prisoners in the Nazi concentration camp at Buchenwald.

One was Dr. Peter Zenkl, a former mayor of Prague and one-time Deputy Prime Minister of Czechoslovakia. The others were Dr. Paul Heller, now practicing here, and Dr. Kurt Sitte, a physics professor at Syracuse University.

The three testified behind closed doors at a Senate committee investigation of the army's alleged "leniency" toward Ilse Koch, the notorious "belle of Buchenwald." Her life term sentence has been reduced to four years.

Brig. Gen. Emil Kiel, president of the military court that tried, convicted and imposed the sentence, was another witness. He told reporters after the closed-door questioning that he would do the same thing all over again.

Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) said the committee today will hear two officers who reviewed the trial record and ordered the penalty reduction. He identified them as Col. J. L Harbaugh, judge advocate for the European theater, and Lieut. Col. Clio Straight, his deputy.

Ferguson declined to discuss the testimony of the three Czechs beyond saying they told of "general conditions" at the camp.

The committee also plans to hear William Denson, who prosecuted Mrs. Koch. Now a civilian, he has been sharply critical of the clemency shown her.

Frau Koch's life sentence was cut to four years after an Army review board said the evidence did not support the severity of her sentence. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in Germany, approved the board's action.

Chairman Ferguson said he expects to file a report on the inquiry by the end of the month.

The committee already has drafted a preliminary report which was reported to point out that only Clay can reverse the board's action. The report was said to express the hope that Clay will order Frau Koch tried on new charges.

Walter Drafts New DP Bill

Representative Walter (D., Pa.) yesterday completed a new displaced persons bill, which he said would eliminate all the features President Truman has objected to in the present law.

Walter, the No. 2 Democrat on the House Judiciary Committee, which handles such legislation, told a reporter he will introduce the measure when the new Congress opens January 3.

His bill, he said, would (A) guarantee against racial, religious or nationalistic discrimination, (B) double the number of homeless Europeans eligible to enter the United States, and (C) give them four years—instead of two years—from last July to apply for admission.

Under the present law, 205,000 European refugees are to be given entry to this country in the next two years. The measure, passed by the Eightieth Congress last July, was denounced by President Truman during the recent campaign as being unfair to Jews and Catholics. Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, the Republican presidential candidate, also was critical of it.

Walter's bill would declare a displaced person eligible for consideration if he entered Germany, Austria or Italy on or after September 1, 1939, and on or before April 21, 1947.

The present dates are September 1, 1939, and December 22, 1945. By moving up the latter date, Walter said, thousands of persons would become eligible who moved into Germany, Austria or Italy to escape the Russians. This provision, he said, would apply especially to Poles.

New England Men Found to Be Strongest, And Those From This Region the Weakest

new system of clothing sizes and stop ordering unwanted sizes.

However, the results promise an even more important benefit to the Army—better use of manpower. The Harvard report finds that the present method of assigning soldiers to duties may not be more than 50 per cent efficient. It proposes that body build, as well as mental tests, be used in assigning recruits, as such physical characteristics play an important role in getting "round pegs in round holes."

Maj. Gen. W. H. Middleswart, deputy quartermaster general, suggests that personnel managers of the future may be able to place an individual in the proper job literally by taking his measurements.

Summarizing the report, the Army commented that it "discloses marked distinctions in the relation of body types to the military and civilian sociological histories of the men, as well as their ethnic origins."

Negroes were found to differ in body build from white soldiers, but body type trends in age, education, military rank, civilian occupation and marital status were similar. The Negroes, it was reported "are characteristically thinner and more lightly muscled than whites, except that shoulder musculature tends to be heavier and trunk musculature somewhat sharper in definition."

The Harvard report found definite relationship between body builds and Army branches and specialties. AAF pilots, it was said, are "notable for muscular body build types, whether thin, submedium, medium or fat." The combat infantry is the "corps elite of the Army from the standpoint of body type."

Other Army field forces including engineers go in for the "heavier fatter types of muscularity." On the other hand, communications men run thin, with not much muscle, and the supply branches are notable "for tremendous overloading with fat and very fat types." The maintenance soldier "is remarkable for high muscularity associated with heavy fat deposits." Medicos also run to fat.

Differences between Negro soldiers showed much less variation in this respect. A reason suggested by the Harvard report is "that Negroes have been assigned, without much attention to individual capacity or difference, to certain restricted units and specialties."

Dr. Hooten explained the relationship between body build and religion in part by national racial origin. New England contains a higher proportion than the South and West of second-generation Americans who come from heavier stock than the Anglo-Saxons and Irish who dominate other areas. Similar reasons explain the larger proportion of fat men in the New York area, and the differences between Protestants, Catholics and Jews, it was said.

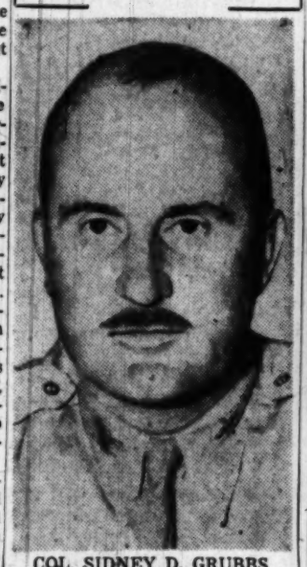
Grubbs Takes Bolling Post Wednesday



COL. SIDNEY D. GRUBBS
Gets Bolling Base Command

A 38-year-old veteran of 85 combat missions, Col. Sidney D. Grubbs of Martinsville, Ind., will assume command of Bolling Air Force Base Wednesday, the Air Force announced yesterday.

Colonel Grubbs relieves Gen. B. M. Hovey, who will be assigned to the United States Embassy in Argentina as Air Attache, according to Gen. Muir S. Fairchild, vice chief of staff, USAF.

A fighter pilot with a command pilot rating, Colonel Grubbs assumed command of Maxwell Air Force Base at Montgomery, Ala., last June. Previously he was chief of staff of the Air University at Maxwell, and prior to that, secretary of the Air War College.

The new Bolling commander served 32 months in the China-Burma-India theater of operations with the Tenth and Fourteenth Air Forces during the last war.

A graduate of West Point in 1933, Colonel Grubbs completed his pilot training at Randolph and Kelly Air Force Bases in Texas a year later. Before World War II, his assignments were chiefly with the Air Force Training Command.

Lila Leeds in Sweater Stops Traffic; Fined $5

Los Angeles, Dec. 8 (AP).—Actress Lila Leeds, who with film actor Robert Mitchum and two others is awaiting trial on marijuana charges, paid a $5 fine in traffic court today for jaywalking.

The 25-year-old blonde tied traffic in a knot, police told Judge Roger Pfaff, when she walked out into heavily traveled Wilshire Blvd. clad in a white turtle-neck sweater, red plaid skirt and red shoes.

"I don't remember a thing," Miss Leeds said, "except a lot of whistles, shouts and horns blowing. I guess I'm guilty, though."

Punch-and-Cookie Reception Opens Inaugural Housing Unit

The Washington Post

BREATHING SPELL—Enjoying a few moments' respite at a party yesterday, before the Housing Bureau of the 1949 Inauguration begins its tremendous task, Mrs. Ernest Lindley, chairman, offers cookies to Mrs. Max Truitt (left) and Mrs. Julius A. Krug (right), wife of the Secretary of the Interior

The 1949 Inaugural Housing Bureau, sure to be the scene of hard pre-inauguration toil, was opened yesterday afternoon with a sociable punch-and-cookies reception. The eight offices—each of four-desk capacity—were ready for inspection.

The Housing Bureau, under the chairmanship of Mrs. John C. McClintock, is operating at 509 14th st. nw. to register available rooms and give information to the three quarters of a million visitors expected to come to town for the inaugural.

The Hotel Association, which knows what the Housing Bureau is up against, sent a wreath inscribed "Rest in Peace" to remind the committee of its duty to the crowd expected here on the inaugural weekend.

Rooms may be registered by phone at ST. 1555, ext. 1333, although all rooms will be inspected before they are offered to inauguration visitors.

Among the guests at the formal opening were Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Max Truitt, daughter of Vice President-elect Alben Barkley; Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. India Edwards, Miss Katherine Blackburn, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Mrs. Campbell Johnson, Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Mrs. Wiley Rutledge and Commissioners John Russell Young, Guy Mason and Gordon R. Young.

Also present were Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. Julius Krug, Mrs. Homer Cummings, Miss Frieda Hennock and Mrs. Charles Thompson.

Inaugural Parade Tickets of $2 to $10 Back on Sale

Inaugural parade seats ranging from $2 to $10 are still open to the public, the Inaugural Committee announced yesterday.

Melvin D. Hildreth, committee chairman, said the $2-to-$10 sales were reopened after a conference with John F. Morrissey, ticket committee chairman. The $2, $8 and $10 seats are virtually exhausted, however, Hildreth said.

He also announced that a block of about 800 seats in stands to be built south of the Treasury Building will be reduced from $6 to $5 a seat. In addition, stands seating 2600 persons will be erected in front of the old State Department Building. Ticket prices for these have not been fixed.

Ticket applications may be made by mail or in person at Inaugural Committee Headquarters in the Tariff Building, 700 E st. nw.

The Democratic Central Committee will meet at 4 p. m. today to plan the type of float it hopes will represent the District in the inaugural parade, Hildreth said.

Some members favor a float reminding out-of-town visitors that Washington is voteless, he said, while others favor a float that would "welcome" the visitors without carrying a message.

Committee members advocating the suffrage float want it to reflect the committee's "feeling for suffrage," he said. He said the District Commissioners probably would make the final decision on the float to represent Washington.

Hildreth also announced that the 30-piece Ringling Brothers Band has been lined up for participation in the parade. It will be here for several days during the inaugural festivities, he said.

1449 W. Va. Teachers Rated Substandard

By The Associated Press

West Virginia lagged behind the Nation in percentage reduction this year of school teachers holding substandard certificates, a National Education Association report shows.

The survey lists West Virginia with 1558 such certificates in the 1947-48 school year and 1449 this year. This is a decrease of nearly 7 per cent, as compared to a national average decrease of about 12 per cent. Other State percentage decreases included Maryland, 12, and Virginia, 7.

One in 5 Men Prey To Kidney Trouble

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A general average of one in every five men who pass their mid-fifties can expect to require surgery of the genito-urinary tract, it was authoritatively estimated yesterday.

It is a relatively rare complaint of such order, a unilateral kidney cyst, that has laid low the Secretary of State, Gen. George C. Marshall.

More frequently, Washington urologists interviewed yesterday said, genito-urinary complaints leading to surgery involve the prostate glands, kidney and bladder stones, and tumors.

More than half of the male complaints requiring surgical procedure involve enlargement of the prostate gland following the male change of life, the Washington urologists said. The others, in order of their prevalence, involve bladder stones, kidney stones, malignant (cancer) tumors of the bladder and kidneys, and tuberculosis of the kidneys. The last is a secondary phase of chest tuberculosis.

Formations Explained

Unilateral cysts, believed to be a result of embryonic malformation, can be removed by themselves if they form on the outside of the kidney sac, it was explained. However, when they form within the kidney, they destroy the kidney function, requiring surgical removal of the organ.

Even more rare, and fortunately so, are bilateral polycystal involvements of the kidneys. In such instances, the cyst or cysts form jointly in both kidneys. The complaint bars removal of the organs since, though the body can get on admirably with but one kidney, destruction of both is fatal.

The surgeon's only recourse in such cases, said urologists, is surgically to puncture the cyst sac, relieving its pressure on the organs and its accompanying pain. The complaint is chronic and progressive because the cysts reform and refill periodically. Eventually, the cyst pressure damage to the kidney insides results in death from destruction of the organs.

Pain Is Chief Symptom

Perhaps the chief symptom of kidney cysts, urologists agree, is pain, experienced low in the back at the kidney site. A second sign is abnormal urine, evidenced by cloudiness from infection within the kidney.

The symptom of prostate gland enlargement in the aging male is difficulty to pass water in normal amount. Urination is frequent, lengthy and low in volume. Pain is seldom experienced in such cases, they said.

Only when prostate tumors are cancerous, which is rare, is the entire sex organ removed. More generally, the tumor itself is cut off, urologists said. Such surgery predisposes a person to later formation of bladder stones, but this development is minimized by careful follow-up examinations of the patient for a year following the surgery.

Surgery Usually Required

Bladder stones are removed by surgeons through incision in the bladder wall during artificial drainage of the sac. Surgical care is taken to prevent infections from fluid leaks into the abdomen until the incision is closed.

Considerable research has been done, with some success, on methods to dissolve stones within the kidneys and bladder, it was reported. But urologists agree, generally speaking, if the stone exceeds that stage where it cannot be passed out, surgery is indicated.

Both bladder stones and the more painful kidney stones are formed within the organ around the nucleus of some obstruction. They range from grain-size, which often pass out unnoticed, to larger than walnut shells.

Blood Is Warning

As in many genito-urinary complaints, the first sign of kidney stones is blood in the urine. The warning condition should never be ignored, urologists said. Frequently, however, persons are lulled into a sense of security when they note that the blood-in-urine condition lapses within 24 hours, they said.

Cancerous tumors of the bladder or kidneys may also cause blood in the urine, the specialists said, and in such cases it is doubly important that remedial steps be taken. Though the blood sign may be manifest for only 24 hours, it reappears at later, more progressively serious intervals, they said.

The same sign may show up otherwise unnoted kidney injuries suffered largely by children and by athletes. Urologists say that in injuries where the kidney wall is not ruptured, the patient may regain normal function of the impaired organ simply by long periods of rest and inactivity. Rupture of the kidney wall, however, indicates need of immediate surgical procedure, they said.

Marshall Sits Up at Hospital

Secretary of State George C. Marshall yesterday was reported recovering satisfactorily from the operation Tuesday in which a kidney was removed.

He was even sitting up in bed, said a 3:30 p. m. (EST) bulletin issued by Walter Reed Hospital.

"General Marshall's temperature, pulse and respiration are normal. His general condition is satisfactory. There are no complications and no reasons to expect any."

It was revealed after the operation that the kidney condition had been known for a year, and the operation was delayed because of world affairs.

Marshall, who will be 68 on December 31, is expected to need a long period in which to recuperate. Undersecretary of State Robert A Lovett is serving as Acting Secretary.

Ashida Jailed, Accused Of Accepting Bribes

Tokyo, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—Former Premier Hitoshi Ashida and two members of the Japanese Diet were locked up in Kosuge Prison today after they were questioned about charges that they accepted bribes in a futile attempt to block legislation giving the state control of all coal mines.

Bid on Approach To Bay Bridge Cuts Estimate

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 8 (AP).—The low bid submitted for the western shore approach to the Chesapeake Bay Bridge was "slightly less" than State engineers had estimated it would be.

The Williams Construction Co. of Middle River submitted a bid of $197,397 yesterday. Walter D. Hopkins, deputy chief engineer of the State Roads Commission, said the company's offer was less than the most recent engineering estimates for the job.

The project includes a little more than three-quarters of a mile of grading and drainage work to prepare for later paving of a dual highway running northeast off the present Sandy Point-Matapeake ferry road.

Medical Group Ends 8-Month Africa Tour

Philadelphia, Dec. 8 (AP).—A naval medical science grouop returned from an eight-month 21,000-mile trip through 15 countries of Africa today with what was described as a "solid knowledge of tropical diseases."

The group, which started in Port Said, Egypt, last February as part of the University of California African expedition, collected rare specimens and established a medical information exchange program.

Returning aboard the light cruiser Huntington were Dr. Ernest Schwartz, a leading zoologist; Comdr. J. M. Amberson, Comdr. T. K. Ruebush, all instructors at the Naval Research Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., and H. S. Cope, jr., photographer's mate second class.

Dr. Schwartz told a news conference aboard the Huntington that the expedition fulfilled a threefold purpose.

"We studied tropical medicine, gathered teaching material for the School of Tropical Medicine at Bethesda and created a liaison between African countries and the United States."

He said the expedition gathered thousands of specimens that are expected to provide important information to the Navy in its constant research and study in the field of tropical diseases.

Your Town

The Washington Board of Trade is to be congratulated on the community service it is performing in its new series of radio broadcasts. Entitled "Your Town," they are heard each Sunday from 1:15 to 1:30 p. m. over WTOP. Naturally, these programs are designed primarily to give the Board of Trade viewpoint on local issues. The first program, for example, dealt with President Truman's forthcoming inaugural and drew for background upon a board member who had been present at President McKinley's inaugural in 1900. This was a way of indicating that the Board of Trade has been associated with a great variety of community enterprises during its 59 years, a period during which its membership has grown from 200 to 8000. Certainly among these 8000 members there is a great reservoir of informed talent competent to discuss not only matters in which the Board of Trade is directly concerned but also such over-all problems as the District budget, highways and relations with Congress. With proper representation of opposing viewpoints, the programs give promise of becoming a real forum which can encourage the interest of Washingtonians in what makes their city tick.

Cargoes To Europe

At least two issues are involved in ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman's warning that he may cut loose from the 50-50 rule in shipping bulk cargoes to Europe in American bottoms. The first and subsidiary one is whether the ECA's interpretation of the terms of the Economic Cooperation Act is legitimate and proper. The second and fundamental issue is whether the purpose of aiding European recovery should take precedence—at least in Marshall Plan operations—over the purpose of assuring to the United States the existence of a strong merchant marine.

On the first point, the law says that "The administrator shall . . . assure, so far as is practicable, that at least 50 per centum of the gross tonnage of commodities, procured within the United States . . . and transported abroad on ocean vessels, is so transported on United States flag vessels to the extent that such vessels are available at market rates." There are two escape clauses here. The ECA, contending that the higher rates United States vessels have to charge makes them "unavailable" at the lower world market rates of foreign bottoms, has taken advantage of the second. It has done so with the foreknowledge of the congressional "watchdog" Committee on Economic Cooperation.

The history of the act shows that the 50-per cent clause was inserted, over the objection of the Administration, at the insistence of the maritime unions and owners, and with the unanimous support of the Maritime Commission. It shows also that the escape clauses were likewise added, at the insistence of the executive branch, with full congressional knowledge that they might be used in the way now contemplated by Mr. Hoffman. In short, it cannot be urgued that the ECA is attempting to twist or evade the language of the law.

The amount of money the ECA might have saved over the past eight months had it shipped all bulk cargoes at the lower foreign rates seems to be relatively small. The exact amount is uncertain, but is thought to be on the order of 25 to 50 million dollars. The latter figure would amount to about 11/3 per cent of total ECA European authorizations to date of $3,700,000,000. It does, however, reduce by that much ECA expenditures for direct aid to Europe.

This brings up the fundamental issue. In our opinion, the ECA is correct in seeing its primary function as assisting the European nations to regain their economic feet, which for some of them requires that they earn dollar income from ocean shipping services. Likewise, it seems to us that Congress' intention in approving the Economic Cooperation Act was to put European recovery first and to give a subsidy to the American merchant marine only insofar as that would not damage the first purpose.

A very strong argument can be made for preserving a large fleet of American cargo-carriers as a strategic auxiliary weapon. It means Government subsidies, of course. But the Marshall Plan is not the vehicle for accomplishing that end. It should be faced and acted upon separately and directly, as it obviously would have had to be in the absence of any Marshall Plan appropriations.

Battered Chest

While Community Chest drives in other cities have been going over the top, Washington's campaign has ended in another inglorious failure to meet the goal. Of the $4,766,790 sought by our United Community Services, $3,379,918 has been pledged. This is, to be sure, some $200,000 more than was raised last year. But the 1949 campaign included a larger proportion of funds for District hospitals as the price of past neglect; also, the costs of welfare services have risen. The result is that the participating agencies will receive less money than in 1948, and there will have to be a reduction of staffs and impairment of activities.

An example is the Boy Scouts, which in guiding future citizens renders about as important a service to the community as can be found. Since 1929 the Boy Scout membership in Washington has doubled. Yet the Scouts' share of funds from the Community Chest next year will actually be less than it was 20 years ago. If the Scouts were forced to subsist solely on the money supplied by the Chest, they would have to reduce their metropolitan area staff from 14 to 8 persons, as well as to increase their fees for such activities as camps to the point where they would work a hardship. A staff reduction would of course entail less supervision and stimulus to the various Scout troops. Other agencies with similar problems may be pardoned for looking wistfully at the possibility of individual campaigns. Yet a hundred or more separate pleas for money is certainly not the answer to the problem.

There is no point in trying to pick a scapegoat for the failure, though certainly every reason ought to be analyzed. Some of the reasons are intangible, such as the notorious lack of community consciousness in Washington—a product in part of the city's voteless status and anomalous government. Paradoxically, many of the foreign relief drives, of which Washington has a plethora, do exceptionally well. It is pertinent to inquire whether, in view of the scope of ERP some of the energy devoted to such drives might not better be employed on a cause closer to home.

Undoubtedly the election contributed to a feeling of job uncertainty among some Government workers—though there is no reason for that feeling to hold after the voting. Dissension among some community groups also may have been a factor. Small business, for example, showed less than a 30 per cent participation. It is apparent that the recent reorganization of the Chest did not mollify all critics—something that must be taken into account in determining future Chest representation. Likewise, the campaign had to contend with misconceptions that pictured the Chest as a mere charity enterprise, which it decidedly is not. The principal function of the Chest is to correlate vital services outside and beyond the scope of relief.

All these factors, though important, are incidental to the feeling of defeatism that pervaded the 1949 drive from the start. No one had much enthusiasm for the campaign, and it was not publicized thoroughly or dramatically despite the efforts of newspapers and radio. This points up the most obvious need of all. If the Chest is to recoup its failure and to avoid future fiascos, then it must start now on a concentrated, continued effort at community education designed to prove to the individual Washingtonian in personal terms just what the Chest means to him.

Auto House Cleaning

If the Macy Subcommittee hearings on automobile sales practices bring no other result than a serious effort at self-discipline within the industry, they may have been well worth while. Whether or not the committee could substantiate its estimate that the buying public has paid 450 million dollars in overcharges during the first seven months of this year, the hearings obviously have struck oil in the cases that have been investigated. The exposes, to be sure, would have been more convincing if they had extended to all parts of the country. But it is hardly a convincing defense for dealers who have been singled out and accused of unethical practices to point to others doing the same thing. Every car owner and potential car owner—a large proportion of the population—has an interest in eliminating such sales abuses as undervalued trade-ins, tips, favoritism and unwanted extras.

It is encouraging that the National Automobile Dealers Association has taken the committee's recommendations in good spirit and has lent its support to a house cleaning within the industry. The association points out that it has been pursuing such a campaign among its 35,000 members since 1946. The disclosures of the Macy Subcommittee afford a good peg for an intensified self-policing campaign not only by the dealers' association but also by the manufacturers. A clean-up sponsored by the automotive industry itself is the most effective sort of reform because it is grounded in enlightened self-interest. Letters to this newspaper have testified to many instances of honest dealing. Certainly it is to the advantage of such dealers to isolate the bad apples that are spoiling the barrel.

OBJECT LESSON

Up the long slope I walked, as one who would Recall in a familiar scene the form
And face of the beloved who once stood
Upon that height, before the mortal storm.
Down to the other side, I ran, and said
"There is no memory of him here: I must
Outstrip grief's shadow and the lonely dead,
Shake from my sandal the remembering dust."
Breathless, I found a hidden path grown thick
With vine and bramble, where we had not been
On any day. And turned, to see our quick
Reluctant glance fade in the leafy green,
And learned that moment sorrow has no season,
Nor will the heart be tutored by cold reason.

ELEANOR ALLETTA CHAFFEE

Let's Have The Facts

The celebrated case of Chambers versus Hiss, or Who Betrayed What? has now been converted into a four-ring circus. That is to say, as the result of the discovery of the mysterious Pumpkin Papers, four different investigations of the case are simultaneously in progress. First of all there is the civil action for $75,000 libel damages, brought by Mr. Hiss against the man who has accused him of having been a fellow conspirator and spy in the service of Comrade Stalin. There is the investigation which is being conducted by the Department of Justice on the basis of information said to be contained in the Pumpkin documents. There are the hearings being conducted for the most part in camera by the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives. There is the inquiry within the Department of State to discover whether any of its present personnel is compromised by these documents. Finally, there are the hearings by the Federal Grand Jury in New York, to determine whether any evidence contained in the Pumpkin Papers can be made the basis of criminal indictments.

Meanwhile, however, that part of the public which is attempting, without prejudice, to decide whether an elaborate and outrageous conspiracy in the Stalinist interest did really exist within the heart of the United States Government, is left to make what relevant conjectures it can from such fragments of information as one or another of the four teams of investigators deems fit to disclose. The extent of public knowledge concerning the contents of the Pumpkin Papers might be summarized thus: (1) Originals or accurate copies of certain documents classified as secret and confidential are among them; (2) These included correspondence between the Department and Mr. Bullitt, then American Ambassador at Paris; (3) If these particular documents were put into possession of the intelligence service of a foreign power, the documents enabled that power to discover the keys to the diplomatic codes in use at that time (1937) and thus to become privy to all American diplomatic secrets; (4) The abstraction or even literal copying of these documents was a flagrant violation of departmental rules and an infamous breach of confidence on the part of the persons concerned.

After Tuesday's session of the Federal Grand Jury, at which Mr. Chambers, apparently, was the principal witness, Mr. McGohey, the United States Attorney in charge of the case, said to reporters: "We are closer than we have ever been to a final (sic) conclusion. We are finally getting some real evidence." Presumably Mr. McGohey meant evidence that could be made the basis of a criminal action, although it is difficult to guess what this might be. Indictments for treason seem to be precluded by the Constitution, which defines treasonable action as that of giving aid and comfort to the enemies to the United States. In 1937 the United States had no ostensible enemies; Soviet Russia was then as now technically a friendly power. Indictments under the espionage act of 1917 seem to be precluded under the three-year period of limitations, and this of course would apply also to the amended version of the law enacted in 1938. However, nobody expects Mr. McGohey to disclose evidence given to a Grand Jury, or even to indicate in advance of actual indictments what statutes might be invoked.

But this scarcely applies to the Committee on Un-American Activities, which is supposed to be functioning in the interest of general legislative wisdom. The objection to making public the contents of the Pumpkin Papers comes, as we understand, from both the Departments of Justice and State. In the one case the argument seems to be that publication might hamper further investigation, and in the other that it might embarrass diplomatic relations with a foreign power, presumably Russia. Such solicitude seems somewhat inconsistent in a government which has recently permitted some of its own representatives to describe the Soviet statesmen in such terms as "international shysters," "aggressive barbarians," and "murderers."

To the first argument we might reply that the public interest would be best served by putting an end to the storms of accusations and counteraccusations about ulterior motives which have accompanied the progress of the committee's investigations up till now. This can be done by producing tangible and incontestable evidence of conspiracy, if such evidence exists. To the second argument it might be retorted that our international situation could hardly be worse than it is; for that matter, it could have been no worse than it is if all these secret and confidential documents had been made public in 1937. The inescapable inference from what little has already been disclosed is that the only interested party from which these secret documents were kept really secret was the American people.

Nor is it at all clear why the publication of diplomatic communications of the year 1937 need further disturb the precarious balance of world peace, although one can easily imagine that it might disturb the peace of retired personages. In view of the prevalent habit of department heads and other high officials at the conclusion of their tenure of office of taking with them whatever documents might be useful in the preparation of their memoirs, we must say that the argument seems altogether disingenuous.

Monroe Doctrine

It seems to me that a falsification of history in the interest of propaganda or under the influence of hysteria ought to call forth protest. Hence, I protest your bald statement in your December 2 editorial that: "It is perhaps not generally understood even now that the Monroe Doctrine . . . had its original inspiration . . . in resistance to Russian imperialism."

This is full of weasel-words, but is obviously meant to leave the impression that the essence of the Monroe Doctrine was fear of Russia. This is simply not true.

The Monroe Doctrine's principle was resistance to European absolutism of all sorts, not merely Russian, and we were in fact thinking far more of Spain than Russia; it was resistance to the principle of joint intervention against revolutionary movements in this hemisphere, an issue which had been raised by the revolts of the Spanish colonies.

In regard to the problem of Russian colonization on the West Coast, you might have pointed out that this question was settled amicably without reference to the Monroe Doctrine by two nations which at that time found no difficulty in settling their disputes and living on the best of terms. It seems a poor thing indeed to invoke, falsely, the ghosts of dead disputes to add fuel to present ones.

Editor's Note: The "bald statement" in the editorial to which our correspondent objects was fully supported in the note dispatched to St. Petersburg in July, 1823. In that note the principle of the Monroe Doctrine—that any territorial encroachment on the American continent by a non-American power would be regarded as an unfriendly act toward the United States—was set forth for the first time. It was not until a month later that Canning proposed the joint proclamation of this principle in the case of the Spanish colonies. It was not until five months later that Monroe sent his famous message to Congress applying the principle to the efforts of the Spanish king to regain his lost territories.

"Twelfth Reprieve"

I have read your well written editorial of December 6 entitled "Twelfth Reprieve." I have witnessed the execution o. some 300 men and women and based on their statements, I feel that the death penalty serves no good purpose.

From the viewpoint of religion no man can prepare for death in the shadow of the electric chair. They may all deserve eternal damnation, but it goes away from the teachings of Christ to execute them. You cannot promote religious beliefs by any such a process. It's mockery for a preacher to attend a man to be executed.

There may be a difference of opinion as to how far you are justified in your editorial anent the delays in the Wheeler-Patton cases. You criticize the lawyers who are sworn to do everything possible on behalf of their clients a d you criticize the courts, trial and appellate, for granting enough time at various stages of the proceedings to examine adequately the lawyers' contentions. In fairness to both lawyers and courts, you should specify what delays were unnecessary and why. Condemned men are traditionally given the benefit of all doubt.

If it's law delays and legal technicalities you are worrying about, some 40 defendants in the infamous mass "sedition" indictments would appreciate your excoriation of the methods of the government prosecutors and judges in keeping these alive as a menace long after an eight-month trial had failed to produce any evidence of guilt.

The whole scandalous affair covered five full years. Two of the indictments were considered too flimsy even to take into court, yet the defendants therein were kept under bond or imprisoned throughout the entire period. And now, to make matters still worse, the various defendants are unable to recover the property that was illegally taken from them, although the case was disposed of about 18 months ago.

"Slow Boat To China"

I am amazed at Mr. Rickert's narrow interpretation (letter published December 3) of your inside story and revealing cartoon (November 30) regarding Mme. Chiang. The Washington Post was attacking Mme. Chiang as a symbol, not a person.

As a symbol she represents a worn-out, corrupt and inept group completely incapable of handling the present Chinese crisis. Someone has to reveal the futility of giving aid to the wrong hands. Everyone agrees that Mme. Chiang is an extraordinary woman with an immense personality. But to be naive again about her husband's brand of ruling is dangerous, internationally. Herblock has to be blunt at times and this time he is strikingly so—our illusions of Mme. Chiang must be broken.

"False Economy"

In the interest of fair play to police officers, their families and citizens of the District of Columbia, I wish to bring to your attention some pertinent facts that are related to your editorial of October 24, "False Economy."

This editorial discussed a proposed pay raise for police officers, such a proposal having been made by Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett to the Commissioners. In outlining his proposal, Major Barrett had disclosed the inability of his department to recruit replacements to fill vacancies caused by normal loss of personnel due to retirements and the abnormal loss due to resignations.

In addition to a pay increase, the superintendent also expressed the opinion that inequalities in hours worked by policemen in comparison to hours worked on other occupations requiring about the same qualifications had a great bearing on the dearth of available manpower. He suggested that a reduced workweek of five days as against the present six-day week would do much to attract desirable men to the department. Your editorial was in accord with the plea for higher salaries.

Later you say, "Demands for introduction of the five-day week which would be a departure from the general practice prevailing throughout the country are controversial." This feeling that inasmuch as no other police departments were on a workweek of less than six days, the recommendation was highly dubious would perhaps be reasonable grounds on which to base a reluctance on the part of your paper to back or sponsor this proposal if it were true. Inquiry will show, however, that many cities are now working their police officers a 44-hour week and several others are using a 40-hour week.

For example: New York City, 44 hours per week at a yearly salary of $4200; Detroit, Mich., 40 hours at a salary of $3700; Los Angeles, Calif., 41 hours at a salary of $3780; San Francisco, 44 hours at a salary of $3480; Oakland, Calif., 44 hours at a salary of $3504. Cities such as Akron, Ohio; Fort Wayne, Ind., Gary, Ind., Norfolk, Va., Reading, Pa., Dearborn, Mich., Fresno, Calif., Alameda, Calif., Rochester, Minn., and Palo Alto, Calif., are working 40 hours a week. A hurried search has revealed that at least 60 cities are now working their police officers less than 48 hours.

I submit these facts and opinions to you in the hope that they will aid in bringing to the public a fair and comprehensive picture of why the local police department is undermanned by over 200 men and why several compromises in the quality of the men needed are being considered. These compromises if put into effect will only tend to reduce the efficiency of the present force, and will certainly discourage men of high quality to consider police work as a career. I feel that it is no time to economize by failing to make working conditions favorable enough to secure the needed men and of a desirable quality.

Religion In The Schools

As a Protestant, I would like to comment on the question of introducing sectarian instruction into the public schools on the so-called "released-time" basis. I agree with The Washington Post that the country is in sad need of a revival of religion—not religion which produces only a more rigid practice of the outward forms of godliness but religion which, by encouraging constant self-assessment in communion with God, penetrates the community with a real understanding and practice of the ethics oof Christian living.

I also agree with The Washington Post that the teaching of sectarian religion must remain and be strengthened in the home and in the church. Mutual tolerance is the essence of democracy and our democratic principles can only suffer by the introduction of religious diversity into the only truly unifying instrument which is ours, the public school system. A child would do best to understand the brotherhood of man on a non-sectarian basis before the cleavages among us are so sharply brought to his attention. Once he is taught to understand the role of religion in general in our lives and of the several forms religious beliefs have taken, he can still practice his own belief without intolerance for others.

In the November issue of the Atlantic Monthly, Mrs. Eugene Meyer has examined "released-time" experiments and concludes that the result in all cases is merely to increase religious intolerance. This is, of course, not very complimentary to the type of sectarian instruction which the students have received; yet public authorities can make no improvements except insofar as they can "recommend." The school systems may thus become the unhappy recipients of a situation over which they have no control.

Kitchen Slaves —World Issue

By Malvina Lindsay

Break for Housewives

IT WOULD be easy to indulge in a shouting contest with Alexei Pavlov, Soviet delegate to the United Nations General Assembly, over whether it is worse for a woman to have "dishpan" or "pickax" hands. His charge in the U. N. Legal Committee that Soviet wives of foreigners became "kitchen slaves" in their husbands' countries could be easily answered by a mass of statistics on the number of kitchen gadgets, including electric dishwashers, sold in the United States.

It would be pertinent also to cite the extent to which Soviet women wield shovels, axes, other heavy tools, the use of which is reserved to men in Western nations. In addition, one might ask why the American wife, usually pictured by Soviet propaganda as a soft, decadent devotee of glamour, has become overnight the slave of the dishpan.

But it is more valuable and adult for Americans to consider whether there are any particles of truth in the seemingly absurd defense Mr. Pavlov has made of his government's action in refusing to let Soviet women join their foreign husbands. It is also interesting to speculate upon the historic importance of Mr. Pavlov's statement. For he has introduced into a world forum the idea that no woman is supposed to have "dishpan hands"—an idea that may come as surprise to many housewives throughout the world, and even more of one to their husbands.

SOME of the Soviet delegate's charges, like the criticisms of American life made by disillusioned British and Australian war brides, deserve looking into. Fear of unemployment and lack of cultural opportunities in Western nations, which Mr. Pavlov cited among the complaints of Soviet brides, cannot entirely be shrugged off. Nor can Americans disregard the statements made by some British and Australian brides that life in this country was too hurried, noisy and strained, and people here too boastful, superior and clannish.

What is more, we of the United States might do well to inquire whether it is a national weakness that caused our GI's to oversell their Nation's and their families' material luxuries when courting their foreign sweethearts.

All of this should cause Americans to do some reappraisal. Even though the United States has the highest living standard in the world—with the Soviet Union twenty-eighth, according to Colin Clark, authority on international levels of living—there are many families in which wives suffer worse physical hardships than dishpan hands. And even in a time of high employment the fear of being jobless hangs over a large part of the populace as it remembers the depression of the 1930's.

IT CAN well be argued that people pay for certainty of employment by living in a police state. Nevertheless Western democracy must meet the challenge of providing more economic security along with individual freedom if it is to answer effectively the Pavlovs and Vishinskys. And Americans might well put their energies to alleviating the scarcity of grass-roots cultural opportunities instead of wasting them declaiming how few bathtubs there are in other countries.

Farm life in this country is still difficult for women despite the great improvement made in recent years. The emigration from farms is much greater among young women than among young men, and girls leave the farm on an average of three years earlier than boys.

On the whole, though, Mr. Pavlov's raising of the kitchen slavery issue has been a boon to women, including those in his own country. If his remarks are published in Pravda, they may well set Soviet women to thinking about what wives may expect in their own country. For many, if not the majority, of them work outside the home, often in manual labor, and manipulation of the dishpan is considered a trifle in their daily work schedule.

This discussion should also be a bombshell throughout the world to those who hold the traditional idea that woman's place is at the dishpan. It might well open the big question of kitchen slavery, which has never been considered along with industrial sweatshop servitude. It might arouse inquiry into the 56 to 72 hours a week that many housewives insist they are on their feet. It might even help create a wider world market for all the made-in-America kitchen robots.

Ministers In Court

I have read with disgust and indignation your front-page article of December 4 on clergymen in the District who have been summoned to court. Are you so hard up for front-page news that you must stoop to such low tricks as publishing the pictures of some of the ministers to their humiliation, even before they have been served the summons?

Perhaps the people should know that some of the ministers do not turn in the report of a marriage within 10 days after the ceremony but does that mean that each one should have his name emblazoned in black and white across the pages of a newspaper? J. S.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Glamorized Espionage

Childs

EVEN THOUGH the House Un-American Activities Committee appears to have documentary evidence of vital significance, the committee continues to behave with nervous excitability. In the face of material that, if substantiated, calls for the most solemn and careful procedure, the old habit of headline hunting prevails.

Favored reporters have their private leaks from committee members. These reporters make themselves champions of individuals and the particular thesis of individual committee members.

At a press conference in Washington, Representative Richard M. Nixon of California, who made a spectacular and highly publicized flight to Washington from Panama, reads a deposition given in a civil suit, contrary to the rules of the court in which the suit was proceeding. In that deposition Whittaker Chambers accused Alger Hiss of passing out secret documents that were in turn given to a Russian agent.

Then Nixon makes a highly publicized trip to New York. There, six hours after reading the deposition containing the accusation against Hiss, he announces, "We're here to find out who gave this information to Chambers."

The end result is to create an atmosphere of hysteria, suspicions, doubt and uncertainty. What should be weighed and considered with the utmost seriousness, since it involves the most abhorent breach of trust and faith, is thus cheapened and degraded.

CONTRIBUTING to the atmosphere of a publicity man's dream is the apparent rivalry between the committee and the Department of Justice. On the day Nixon held his press conference, word came to the Justice Department that the committee proposed to hold special night hearings in New York as a kind of adjunct to the grand jury inquiry that has been reopened.

One of the leading newsreel companies asked the department when the hearings were to be held so it could set up its cameras. The idea seems to have been that as witnesses came out of the grand jury room they would go before the committee and the Klieg lights.

Grand jury procedure under our system of law is most carefully guarded and the committee's proposal, as it was understood at the Department of Justice, caused something like consternation. That is why the committee members were met in New York by John F. X. McGohey, United States attorney for the Southern District of New York, who is directing the grand jury inquiry.

A stormy session followed. But finally the committee seems to have been dissuaded from going ahead in a manner that might seriously have interfered with the grand jury. By law and by custom, grand jury proceedings are held in secrecy so that witnesses may have full protection and, therefore, feel free to testify without fear of reprisal.

SO MANY questions remain unanswered. The microfilms of secret State Department and Navy documents have presumably been in existence for 10 years or longer. Why should these films have gone undiscovered until Chambers, in his own good time, chose to disclose their whereabouts?

In the hearings last summer the committee seems to have accepted everything that Chambers said as fact, without independent investigation. Presumably, Chambers had the documents and the films in his possession all the time and chose to disclose them only after he was pressed for evidence in Hiss' $75,000 slander suit.

There is, of course, a larger and far more important question. It is why Chambers, by his own confession, and others who may be implicated beyond doubt, should have betrayed their country by stooping to this mean and vicious espionage.

No gloss of misplaced idealism ever can be put over the contemptible work of the spy, the stooge, the saboteur. Only the completely materialistic end-justifies-the-means philosophy of Marxist - Stalinist communism can approve such methods. That philosophy is alien to all that is best and truest in the American tradition.

The public has a right to expect an earnest, concerted effort by Government to find an answer to these and related questions. Once again one must point to the contrast with Canada, where a Royal Commission after long, diligent and careful work behind closed doors gave out a report that is a model of thoroughness and an extraordinary revelation of motive and method. Once again the Un-American Activities Committee seems determined to demonstrate how this kind of inquiry should not be conducted.

Eastern Reds Seek to Keep Grip While Winning People

summer and has not gone too well; it is now being intensified to cut back to the hard, active membership that was the general staff of last February's coup.

The second problem is mass loyalty. In Hungary and Poland loyalty is slowly growing as food on the table increases and schools open; in Czechoslovakia loyalty still rests on promises whose fulfillment lies far beyond the horizon. Everywhere the Communist regimes must persuade the people that the new governments are truly of their own creation, ruling in their interest. This is easiest to do with the workers, who are the most coddled social group in the various countries; it is more difficult with the peasants, who must be introduced in the next decade to collective farming which, however technically desirous, the peasants still fear; it is most difficult with the middle class, whose fate in these governments is to wither and disappear.

In each case the industrial plan is the great promise used to win the loyalty. The press is studded to boredom with industrial statistics and facts of the kind that in America appear only in business journals; the plan is woven over and over again into every speech on every beflagged square. There are thousands of Communists who can say, as one said to me, "In history one generation must be chosen to suffer the revolution so that the other generation will eat well." But for every one such Communist there are a dozen skeptics for whom the plans are pie in the sky.

Loyalty Assured By Police Methods

And until the plans pay off in meat and milk, refrigerators and radios and automobiles, the party must make sure of loyalty by the machinery of dictatorship. The secret police must hunt down and imprison every potential leader of opposition, the censors must vet the press of every disturbing thought and emotion. It may take generations before young collective men and women are born whose dreams have never been seduced by knowledge of another world; but however long it takes before communism becomes an instinct, the police, the labor camps and censors will remain.

The third problem is an administrative one, but critical: it is the task of finding executive talent efficient and trustworthy enough to master-mind the great production drive that alone will buy firm loyalty. The problem of replacing a complete managerial group by another untrained managerial group is overwhelmingly difficult, and the Communists have been moving young men up to high industrial and executive posts faster since the war than has been done anywhere else in the world in the past 25 years. For those who can subscribe to the faith of the regime, all roads are open to their talent. The main burden of planning and administration in these countries rests fundamentally on men between 30 and 40, some of whom are learning their trade as swiftly as did our best junior divisional generals during the war. Poland's Vice Minister of Industry, Szer, is only 32, and Czechoslovakia's Minister of Internal Trade, Krajcir, is still under 35.

The young executives are dynamically hard workers, driving themselves day after day to joyless exhaustion, arriving at their offices at 8 in the morning, working till 7 or 8 in the evening, carrying home full portfolios nightly. Their conversation is surprisingly like that of young businessmen in the United States—and their evenings at home are just as much disturbed by worries over delivery dates, raw material prices and commitments to customers.

Though circumstances differ with fascinating variety from country to country, the general Communist formula remains the same: to hold on to the support of the workers, to pacify and win the peasants, to neutralize and dissolve the city middle class. The party's job is to keep the population enthusiastic, acquiescent or cowed, as the case may be, but under any circumstances to hold it still while the technicians bring to completion the plans which will create Socialist wealth to erase the memory of the past.

Talks to Begin Here on Return Of IAM to AFL

Negotiations will start here next Monday looking toward return of the 624,000-member International Association of Machinists, an independent union, to the American Federation of Labor, it was learned yesterday.

A committee, headed by AFL President William Green and composed of topranking AFL officials who live in Washington, will open conferences with an IAM committee which probably will be headed by Eric Peterson, the union's secretary-treasurer.

The association, whose president is Harvey W. Brown, has twice been in the federation. It was out in 1942 and 1943, returned to the AFL, and left it again in 1945. Both times the split was caused by a feud with the AFL United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, headed by William L. Hutcheson, over whether carpenters or machinists should erect and repair machinery in buildings and on construction projects.

Mad 'Warmonger'

Eisenhower's Book Flayed By Red Critic

Moscow, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—A writer for the authoritative Literary Gazette today denounced Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as a "mad warmonger" who believes that American monopolies should rule the world.

Vassily Danilevsky, a member of the Ukrainian Academy of Sciences, described Eisenhower's book, "Crusade in Europe," as a peculiar mixture of insinuations, born in Megalomania and artificial delirium."

The scathing review accused "this newly appeared warmonger" of piling "one heap of lies on another" by hinting that another war is inevitable.

Danilevsky, attacking Eisenhower's claim he did everything he could to foster Soviet-American agreement during the war, accused the general of conspiring with Britain's Winston Churchill to delay the second front in Europe.

"The general thinks that the role he played during the war by order of American financial magnates has already been forgotten," Danilevsky wrote.

The Soviet writer reacted bitterly to reports that Eisenhower favors world government. He said the American leader "thinks he can deceive the masses into accepting orders from his bosses."

Danilevsky declared Eisenhower wants to wreck the United Nations and substitute world federation which would only "insure the supremacy of American monopolies."

Spaatz Says World Must Lift 'Curtain'

New York, Dec. 8 (U.P.). — The No. 1 task of world diplomacy is to penetrate the iron curtain, Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz, former commanding general of the Army Air Forces, said today.

Spaatz, writing in Newsweek, said the secretive Russian system and the open Western system are "mutually intolerant and one of them must dominate if the struggle continues as it is going now."

"Soviet man can see what the rest of us are doing," he said. "Western man has no such reciprocal privilege. This one-way visibility is too dangerous to be tolerated indefinitely. The primary concern of world diplomacy from now on must be to penetrate the iron curtain."

Spaatz urged that the U. N. propose a freer exchange of peoples and ideas between all nations on a reciprocal basis and give every nation a specific period in which to agree to such reciprocity.

"If the Soviet Union were to agree, reasonable discussion of the problems of atomic control, disarmament and permanent world peace would follow," he said. "If the Soviet Union refused, at least world opinion would have been focused on the underlying cause of the world's trouble in an air-technical age and could be effectively mobilized."

Spaatz said the iron curtain, which shuts off the Soviet sphere to foreign air traffic, is a fundamental cause of conflict between the Soviet and non-Soviet world and will continue to be until all natural air lanes are open to traffic.

"The struggle for dominance is going on now, with the West seriously handicapped in spite of its technical superiority," Spaatz wrote. "By their nature, democracies are precluded from striking the first blow, even though that blow may be decisive in the war of the future because of the increased speed, range, and load capacity of the airplane.

"Air mobility gives sinister meaning to the element of surprise in undeclared war. Hence our instinctive and well-justified fear of the closed system. A secretive and dictatorial government has potent advantages if its objective is conquest."

Jackson Views Iron Curtain As 'Disastrous' to Russians

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Robert H. Jackson predicted tonight that Russia's iron curtain ultimately will be "more disastrous to those it shuts in than to us whom it shuts out."

Jackson said he doubts the wisdom of "many people who think we have to do something, even if something violent, to break through the Soviet iron curtain" and that "we must somehow penetrate it with information, news and our own ideology."

What we would need to fear, he said, would be an "open minded, tolerant and inquiring Soviet Union, thirsting for truth."

"If they want to handicap themselves by closing the Soviet Union's eyes and ears to the actions and thoughts of the Western world, I do not think it strengthens them against us.

"If they want to send their scientists to Siberia because they do not make the cold facts of sciences, such as genetics, support Soviet political theories, I condemn it as inhumane; but I don't think it imperils our security. . . .

"The Nuernberg evidence is that the seeds of eventual annihilation for Hitler's power were sown when he began burning books, exiling scholars, persecuting scientists and closing down on information."

Jackson's Nuernberg reference was to the trial of top Nazi war leaders, at which he served as chief American prosecutor.

Discussing "lessons" of the trial, Jackson said he wished to "confess" he did not come out of the Nuernberg experience "with the usual American passion for re-educating the rest of the world."

"On the contrary, perhaps because of my own shortcomings," he said, "I do come out of it with a strong feeling that we need some reeducating ourselves. Smugness can put an iron curtain around us as effectively as government can. The ignorance that I think is most dangerous to us is our own."

Hungary Faces Cabinet Crisis Over Dinnyes

Budapest, Hungary, Dec. 8 (U.P.). The Smallholders Party announced tonight that it had lost confidence in Premier Lajos Dinnyes, one of its principal leaders.

The party, it was added, must purge its membership of "bourgeois elements who are masking themselves as leftists."

As the result of the party's action, members said, Dinnyes and five cabinet undersecretaries must resign from the government.

The party's decision was made after a long meeting on the case of former Finance Minister Miklos Nyardi, whose flight from the country was disclosed several days ago.

Dinnyes was accused in connection with Nyardi's flight, of failing to exercise "sufficient prudence and vigilance toward two-faced elements in the party."

Nyardi's flight shook the confidence of the Smallholders and of the Communist and Peasant Parties, which form the government coalition, in the party leadership, a communique said.

Austrian 'Spy For U. S.' Gets 20-Year Term

Vienna, Austria, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—Miss Margarethe Ottillinger, chief of the Austrian government planning department, has been sentenced to 20 years in prison on the charge that she spied for the United States, officials said tonight.

Miss Ottillinger was tried in secret by a military court at Russian occupation headquarters in Baden and was not even permitted a lawyer, it was said.

She was arrested early in November by Russian soldiers. She was sentenced last Friday, informants said, and was taken to Hungary.

The Russians charged Miss Ottillinger was guilty of "spying on Soviet troops in behalf of the American intelligence service."

Man Confesses Murder in Hotel

around his neck. His hands had been tied together with his own leather belt, which in turn was fastened by a hotel towel to the head of the wooden bed. Police said he had partially freed his right hand.

His feet were tied with a necktie and then tied by a shirt to the foot of the bed.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said a wadded handkerchief had been thrust down his throat, causing asphyxia by smothering. There were three severe lacerations on his head, probably inflicted by a blunt instrument. The blows had produced a cerebral concussion resulting in a cerebral hemorrhage, Dr. MacDonald said.

Either the suffocation or the blow or both could have caused Hines' death, the coroner said. There were no other marks on the man's body.

The maid had found the door to the room unlocked and the lights still on. She went into a nearby vacant room and telephoned the housekeeper, Mrs. Susan Preble, and Assistant Manager John Garrison who notified police.

Police found the wallet and wrist watch on the table. In addition to travelers' checks, the wallet contained the stub of a bus ticket from Camp LeJeune to Washington and Hines' driver's license. Police also found several marked up bus road maps in the room, indicating Hines planned to complete his trip home by bus.

In Wisconsin, before leaving by plane for Washington, Mrs. Hines said, he had carried little cash, but $200 in travelers' checks with him. She said he always wore the diamond ring, which is missing, on the third finger of his left hand. Dr. MacDonald said the marks of the ring were evident on the finger.

A gray suit was laid neatly on a chair in the room, with brown shoes placed beneath it. Hines' single suitcase, which contained only clothes, was in order.

A half-pint bottle of Tuxedo whisky, about one third full, was standing on the table. In the room and bathroom, police also found four empty Schlitz beer bottles, a glass, which had contained whisky, another which had contained beer, and a third which apparently had been used only for water.

A waiter, John B. Bradley, 39, of 1818 Vernon st. nw., said he had delivered the beer Tuesday afternoon around 4 p. m. There were several men, perhaps two or three, in the room with Hines, he said. He told police, however, that he did not get a good look at any of them.

Although the furniture was not disturbed in the room, police said they believed there had been a struggle when Hines was struck. Blood had splattered on the ceiling, on the venetian blinds, which are about 8 feet away from the bed, and on the wall about 3 feet from the foot of the bed.

Hines was described as a husky man, about 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighing 180 pounds.

The weapon with which he was bludgeoned has not been found.

About a dozen cigarette butts were found in the room. None of them bore traces of lipstick, indicating Hines had had no women visitors, police said.

Police questioned a number of hotel guests on the same floor, but none of them had heard any sounds of a struggle Tuesday night, they said.

One couple, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Jordan of Philadelphia, Pa., who occupied room 616 some distance down the hall from Hines' room, said they heard someone yell "Help" about 10 p. m. At the time, however, fire engines were going by, and they thought it was a gag, the Jordans said.

J. J. Kindelin, an insurance claim adjuster from Chicago, who was staying in room 606, two doors away from Hines' room, said he heard several men in the hallway about 10 p. m.

"They sounded like they were a few drunks, who were marching to hup, two, three four. I did not look out into the hall," he explained.

An elderly couple, who refused to give their names, and who occupy room 602, said they heard no noise during the evening or night.

Neither room 603 or 605, which adjoin Hines' room on each side, was occupied during the evening or night.

Police began an immediate search of the hotel for the murder weapon, checking laundry chutes, trash cans, fire stairways and the alley, on which the windows of the slain man's room look down.

They said Hines must have known the murderers and let them in, since the hall door to the room was the only entrance or exit to the room.

They pointed out that the murderers may have left the hotel unobserved by the service elevator, the entrance to which is almost directly across the hall from Hines' room, or by the fire stairs, located about 15 feet from Hines' room.

Mrs. Hines said her husband left Madison about a week ago to drive to Camp Lejeune with a Madison marine, Sergt. Wayne Boeker, in Boeker's car.

She said she had not heard from her husband or her son since then. She said she did not know her husband planned to stop off in Washington and that she had expected him home yesterday.

Hines stayed two days at Camp Lejeune and left Monday by bus, presumably with a ticket for Madison, Lieut. Charles Campbell, camp public information officer, said last night. Hines was traveling alone, he said.

Hines was employed by a Madison contractor. Besides his wife and son, who is 19, he is survived by his mother, Mrs. Thomas Flood.

'Fast' Minister Slowed Down by Jail Sentence

Los Angeles, Dec. 8 (AP).—After pleading guilty to speeding 70 miles an hour, passing men working on the Arroyo Seco freeway, and making unsafe lane changes, the Rev. Harold A. Lindsay, Pasadena minister, was fined $50 by Judge Roger A. Pfaff.

"Your honor, I thought I would get more consideration," said the minister.

"An automobile driven 70 miles an hour is just as dangerous in the hands of a minister as any other man," replied the court.

"You are being sacrilegious," replied the Rev. Mr. Lindsay.

"Don't call me sacrilegious in my court," snapped Judge Pfaff. "I'm going to give you three days in jail to meditate about your attitude toward this court and our traffic laws."

Many of my customers say:

"IF I HAD ONLY PAID A LITTLE MORE FOR A BETTER SET!"

MAYBE you don't know me yet, but you will.

I'm the fellow who's going to sell you your first television receiver.

Television is a wonderful thing. It's worth every cent you spend for it—if you spend enough!

That's a hard fact you and I have to face together. Good television just can't be cheap.

I have never yet heard a customer say, "I wish I had bought a less expensive set."

But plenty of them say, "If I had only paid a little more for a set with a bigger screen and a better picture."

I sell Du Mont, and several other makes. I'd rather sell you a Du Mont receiver because I know you'll be happy with it. Du Mont will give you a big, clear, bright picture; trouble-free service; long life.

So my suggestion would be that you drop in today and see the full line of Du Mont television receivers.

Perhaps the magnificence of the Du Mont Westminster—with the world's largest direct-view screen (213 square inches!), AM, FM, world-wide short wave radio, and automatic record player—will not fit in with your schemes. There is a wide variety of lower priced Du Mont sets—the compact consoles and table-top receivers, in modern and traditional designs.

Television is too important to settle for anything less than the finest.

District Man Gets Highway Award

G. Donald Kennedy, vice president of the Automotive Safety Foundation, yesterday received the annual George S. Bartlett award for outstanding service to highway transportation progress.

Kennedy, who lives at 4955 Linnean ave. nw., accepted the award of the annual meeting of the highway research board of the National Research Council in the National Academy of Sciences Building.

Former Michigan State Highway Commissioner, Kennedy was introduced by United States Public Roads Commissioner Thomas H. MacDonald who was the first recipient of the honor in 1931.

Kennedy was president of the American Association of State Highway Officials in 1941.

That same year he was named by President Roosevelt to the National Committee on Interregional Highways, serving as vice chairman of that committee, which in 1944 submitted to the President and Congress a report that became the basis for the National System of Interstate Highways now being developed under the Federal-aid highway program.

During the war he was chairman of the American Society of Civil Engineers' committee on postwar construction.

Kennedy was lauded at yesterday's ceremony for highway planning studies made under his direction during the past three years for legislative committees in six states.

Distinguished service awards were presented to Frank H. Jackson, senior engineer of tests for the Public Roads Administration, and Prof. Charles H. Scholer, a member of the faculty of Kansas State College.

Zoning-Parking Group Organizes

The District Zoning-Parking Committee, consisting of District officials and representatives of various organizations, held its organization meeting in the District Building yesterday.

The group will hold a public hearing January 7 at 2 p. m. in the board room of the District Building to hear from invited speakers on aspects of the District's zoning and parking problem.

The committee was appointed by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, to consider the problem and make recommendations for remedial action. Robert O. Clouser, planning director of the District Zoning Commission, is chairman of the committee.

Transit Firm Loses 2 Suits

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday was ordered to pay $9000 in damages to the plaintiffs in two court suits.

A District Court jury awarded $6000 damages for the traffic death in December, 1945, of Army Lieut. Laverne G. Nelson, 22, who was killed by a streetcar as he crossed in front of 231 Pennsylvania ave. se. The money will go to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice S. Nelson, of Rapid City, S. Dak.

Judge Matthew F. McGuire ruled that Lieutenant Nelson was negligent in not paying attention as he crossed the street, but left it for the jury to find whether Richard Slack, the streetcar driver, promptly put on his brakes upon noticing that Nelson was about to cross the tracks.

The plaintiff was represented by Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer.

Miss Blondel Newsom, 37, of 2002 13th st. nw., was awarded $3,000 damages for injuries suffered when she fell from a streetcar.

The award was made by a Municipal Court jury in the court of Judge Armond W. Scott. The jury deliberated 10 minutes.

The evidence as brought out by Attorneys Sidney M. Goldstein and Joseph Bulman showed that Miss Newsom, a Government Printing Office clerk, tripped on a rubber flange of the vehicle's rear door as she alighted at 14th and P sts. nw. on December 19, 1946.

Cuban President Prio Flies Here for Visit; Truman Heads Welcoming Party at Airport

Carlos Prio, President of Cuba, for a short visit to this country, arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon in President Truman's private plane, the Independence. He was welcomed at the airport by Mr. Truman, members of the Cabinet and high Government officials.

The cordial relations between the United States and Cuba were cited by President Truman as typical of the solidarity between the American states, in his welcoming address.

"No two countries of this closely knit hemisphere have been bound together more closely than the Republic of Cuba and the United States," Mr. Truman told his visitor.

"There is no relationship which better typifies the firm solidarity of the American states than the traditionally cordial collaboration between Cuba and the United States," he said.

President Prio replied in Spanish, but drew a laugh from the crowd when a translator, Minister of State Carlos Hevia, quoted the distinguished Cuban as apologizing for not speaking English and explaining that if he had known a few years ago he would become the President of Cuba, he now would be speaking English.

In the middle of his speech, President Prio turned to Mr. Truman and said in English, "I am learning to speak English now."

The Cuban President, at 45 one of the youngest in the republic's history, received full military honors, including a 21-gun slute and an honor guard from all services, as he stepped from the plane to greet Mr. Truman.

In a message which he said came from all Cubans, President Prio referred to Mr. Truman as a "statesman of outstanding virtue, lofty spirit and serenity," with a "broad understanding of the problems of the world."

After the formal speeches and introductions, the two Presidents stood in front of the full honor guard, while the Air Force Band played the Cuban and United States National Anthems.

Members of President Prio's party included Miguel Suarez Fernandez, president of the Senate; Lincoln Rodon, president of the House of Representatives; Hevia, who is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, class of 1919; Gen. Genovevo Perez Damara, army chief of staff, and Brig. Gen. Joseph J. O'Hare, American aide.

President Prio was taken to Blair House where he was honored last night at a stag dinner given by Mr. Truman.

This morning, the Cuban President will visit Mount Vernon and Arlington Cemetery, attend a luncheon given by the Organization of American States, and will be guest of honor at a dinner given by Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett.

Friday, President Prio will lunch at the National Press Club, visit the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and attend a reception in his honor given by the Ambassador of Cuba Guillermo Belt and Senora de Belt.

President Prio was elected to his office on June 1, 1948, and inaugurated on October 10, the candidate of the Cuban Revolutionary-Republican Parties' coalition. He was twice imprisoned and finally exiled as a result of his revolutionary activities in fighting the Machado regime prior to 1933. Prio has been a member of the Constitutent Assembly, the Senate and editor of the Autentico Party newspaper. He served as Prime Minister in 1945 and 1946, and as Minister of Labor in 1947.

U. S. Oil Role in Venezuelan Revolt Denied

The charge of the deposed Venezuelan President, Romulo Gallegos, that American oil companies backed his overthrow, drew a disclaimer yesterday from the State Department.

Gallegos, exiled to Cuba, charged in Havana Sunday that American oil companies and reactionary elements in his country were behind the military coup which ousted him.

The State Department said:

"The Department of State knows of no evidence or indications of any kind which would give the slightest support to such charges. As far as is known to the department, American companies and other entities in Venezuela avoided participation of any kind in the Venezuelan revolution of last month."

The department recalled it has repeatedly warned Americans abroad against interfering in political affairs of foreign states.

Gallegos was an official guest of President Truman early this week.

Meantime, a conflict developed over who is the diplomatic representative here of Venezuela.

Antonio Casas Briceno, embassy counselor for several months, asserted he was now charge d'affaires for the military junta which deposed Gallegos.

Gonzalo Carnevail, Ambassador here since July, 1947, submitted his resignation to the military junta immediately after it seized control, but announced he would remain in charge of the embassy as long as the Gallegos government was the only one recognized by the United States.

Jews, Arabs Given Ultimatum on Negev

Reconsideration

New Action On 7 Nations Asked in U. N.

Paris, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—The United Nations General Assembly tonight decided to ask the Security Council to reconsider the membership applications of nations barred from the U. N. because of the East-West "cold war."

The assembly adopted an Australian resolution for Council reconsideration of Portugal, Trans-Jordan, Italy, Finland, Ireland, Austria anad Ceylon. It also approved a broader Swedish resolution calling for reconsideration of nations nominated for membership by Russia.

Russia vetoed previous membership applications from the seven nations because the Council would not approve Outer Mongolia, Romania, Albania, Bulgaria, and other Soviet satellites.

The Assembly tried hard today to complete work before adjourning on Saturday, but found itself hamstrung by a Soviet-bloc "filibuster."

Delegates from Russia and her East European satellite states tied up meeting after meeting with long-winded speeches, many of them on relatively simple issues.

The one problem on which Russia favored quick action—the disposition of Italy's prewar colonies—was deferred by a majority vote until the Assembly opens its "second-half" session in New York next April.

Paris, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—A special committee of the United Nations Security Council tonight gave the Jews and Arabs of Palestine 48 hours to begin complying with Council orders for withdrawals from the Negev desert and for full-fledged armistice negotiations.

The committee said the Security Council itself will be called into an emergency session, possibly on Saturday, unless appreciable steps are taken to comply with the two orders.

The committee action came after Britain warned that she might be forced to "take action against Israel if Jewish troops launch any large-scale invasion of Trans-Jordan.

The 11-nation Security Council decided, meanwhile, to meet at 10:30 a. m. (4:30 a. m. EST) Friday to consider Israel's application for U. N. membership. The application was referred back to the Council without recommendation from the membership committee.

The Council's special seven-nation Palestine committee will meet Friday to hear the result of U. N. efforts to break the Palestine stalemate within 48 hours.

Dr. Ralph J. Bunche of the United States, acting U. N. Palestine mediator, told the committee today the Negev dispute has created an "impasse."

W. Va. Branch of C. & P. Granted Extra Outlay

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 8 (AP). Additional expenditures of $295,300 for line and other improvements were approved today by the board of directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of West Virginia.

Today's authorizations included $167,500 for cable relief and other work at the new dial office building in Martinsburg and $6000 for additional long-distance circuits between Martinsburg and Winchester, Va.

Dutch Quit U. N. Meeting After Vote

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—The Dutch delegation to the United Nations Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East walked out of today's meeting minutes after the body voted, 8-2, to admit the Republic of Indonesia to associate membership.

Netherlands Delegate Prof. H. C. J. Gelissen warned that the action would cripple the Java conference, now seeking to head off renewal of the Dutch-Indonesian war. He said he was withdrawing the 47 million natives of Dutch-controlled Indonesia from the commission.

The United States voted with the Dutch against admission of 33 million republicans. France, Britain and Siam abstained, but the solid eastern bloc of Australia, Burma, China, India, New Zealand, Pakistan and the Philippines joined with the Soviet Union to push through the membership application.

The vote was a clear victory for the Soviets, who have never in UN history found themselves in such a large majority. The United States has seldom if ever gone down to such a defeat.

Trucker Guilty In Fatal Crash Can't Drink, Drive

A 21-year-old truck driver guilty of negligent homicide in a traffic death was freed yesterday on condition that he neither drink nor drive for five years.

He is Gordon Mumford of 1526 Good Hope rd. se. According to police, he was intoxicated when on January 1 his truck collided with an automobile at Nichols ave. and South Capitol st. Killed in the accident was Miss Betty Louise Parcell, 21, a St. Elizabeths Hospital nurse, a passenger in the car.

Mumford was indicted on a charge of manslaughter but was allowed to plead guilty to the lesser charge of negligent homicide.

In suspending a one-year jail sentence and giving Mumford five years' probation, Judge Alexander Holtzoff pointed out that the defendant had an unblemished record prior to the accident. The judge added that Mumford spent five days in jail as "a taste" between the guilty plea and sentencing.

South Korea Recognition Gains in U. N.

Paris, Dec. 8 (U.P.).—The United Nations Political Committee voted overwhelmingly tonight to recognize the American-backed South Korean regime as the only lawful government in Korea, and it set up a new Korean Commission despite Soviet warnings that it would be boycotted by the Russ-

The vote was 41 to 6, with three absentions, in favor of a three-power resolution that laid down a broad program for guiding Korea to independence.

The plan, which now goes to the General Assembly for approval, sets up a nine-member commission that would be authorized to travel throughout the American and Russian zones of Korea.

The Ukraine was placed on the commission even after its delegate, Dimitri Manuilsky, served notice that he would not sit on it.

The committee rejected a Soviet demand that it abolish the old Korean Commission.

The vote was 40 to 6, with 3 absentions.

The two votes completed the committee's work for this season. The political committee voted after Russia's Jacob Malik accused the United States of using "police terror and oppression" to dominate the non-Communist world.

Malik charged that United States Delegate John Foster Dulles told "fairy tales" and "lies . . . in order to camouflage the policy of suppression and terror which is used . . . everywhere that Americans hold forth."

When he heard himself called a liar, Dulles removed the headphones through which he was getting an English translation of Malik's words.

AMG Relaxes Marriage Bars In Germany

Frankfurt, Dec. 8 (NYHT).—The United States Military Government is unofficially abandoning its long and sometimes futile campaign to govern the course of true love of Americans in occupied Germany, it was learned here tonight from official sources.

For the first time, an American in Germany, not on the United States payroll, can marry a German and continue to live here without getting permission of the American occupation authorities.

After January 1, American soldiers and officers will also be allowed to marry German women and remain here until the completion of their tours of duty, official sources predicted. Previous Army regulations permitted GI-fraulein unions, but the newly married couple had to return to the States within 30 days after the ceremony.

British and French nationals in the United States zone, however, still fall under the original drastic control.

Under the AMG policy, German brides of United States citizens will not enjoy the privileges now accorded American families. They cannot buy food at the Army grocery store, nor cigarettes or other items at post exchanges. Germans, however, can enter the United States with their husbands on nonquota immigration visas and obtain citizenship.

General Eisenhower's wartime dictum of complete "nonfraternization" between American soldiers and defeated Germans was ordered when United States troops entered this country in 1945. This ban was wiped out in October of the same year to permit "fraternization" on a limited basis.

Under the discreet urging of Army chaplains, who frowned on regulations which only encourage illicit relations, the GI was finally allowed to marry his fraulein in December, 1946.

More than 14,000 German brides and their children have been transported to the United States

'David' Ready for Trip Here

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Arlington Names School Architects

Arlington's School Board yesterday announced names of five architects it has selected to design six new school buildings and four additions to present structures.

The schools will be built from a more-than-$6,500,000 bond issue voted by county residents. Of the bonds, $1,776,000 have been sold already.

The architects, selected from 13 firms considered, are:

1. Walton & Associates of Arlington, who will design the eight-room Walter Reed Elementary School addition, the six-room Kate Waller Barrett Elementary addition, and the gymnasium, cafeteria, and shop at the Hoffman-Boston Negro school.

2. Rhees Burkett of Washington, who will plan a new $1,750,000 junior high school on Vacation Lane, which probably will have 33 rooms, and a nine-classroom new elementary school on Greenbriar st. at N. 28th st.

3. McLeod & Ferrara of Washington, hired to design a six-room addition to the Peyton Randolph Elementary School.

4. Ronald L. Senseman of Washington, to design new six-room elementary schools in Glencarlyn

5. Veale & Smith of Baltimore, to plan a new 10-room North Fairlington Elementary School

Ad in Phone Book Results in Suit

Denver, Dec. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Patricia M. Brown asks $250,000 in damages in a suit filed against the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The action, filed in District court yesterday, is based on what Mrs. Brown said was an error in the wording of an advertisement she inserted in the telephone directory for a real estate firm she operated.

The advertisement appearing in the summer edition of the directory contained the phrase "to service you." Mrs. Brown contended the wording submitted by her to the company was "to serve you."

Her suit said the advertisement "caused her great humiliation, mental anguish, loss of business and irreparable harm to her business and personal reputation."

Cop Kicking Costs Errol Flynn $50

New York, Dec. 8 (U.P.)—Errol Flynn peeled off five $10 bills, apologized to all concerned, shook hands with the policeman he kicked in the shins Tuesday and sauntered out of court today.

The actor's troubles with the law were ended but there was a question of whether he was now in the domestic doghouse. His red-haired wife, Nora Eddington, left by plane for Hollywood today. Their trip here had been billed as a reconciliation after a Hollywood disagreement.

Patrolman Joseph Bergeles, kicked by Flynn, magnanimously permitted Flynn to plead guilty to disorderly conduct rather than assault and Judge Henry Schwab gave him the alternative of a $50 fine or 30 days in jail. Flynn chose the former.

Flynn was on time for his hearing at 10 a. m. today. Yesterday he overslept and his case was continued.

229,000-Bale Drop Forecast In Cotton Crop

Bad weather for picking, shortage of labor and flood damage in the South have brought a reduction in this year's cotton crop of 229,000 bales (114,500,000 pounds) in the last month.

Final crop estimate for the year by the Agriculture Department forecast a crop of 14,937,000 bales—worth at present prices about 2700 million dollars.

The report caused a flurry in the cotton market. Futures advanced more than $1 a bale following release of the forecast, but most of this was lost later through profit-taking.

3 Traffic Lights for Silver Spring

Three traffic signals will be installed in Silver Spring by the Montgomery County Council "under protest," at an estimated cost of $9092, it was revealed yesterday.

The signals will be placed along heavily traveled Georgia ave. at Sligo ave. and East-West hwy., and at the intersection of Colesville rd. and Fenton st.

In approving the $9092 "emergency authorization," the councilmen asserted the State Roads Commission is legally responsible for the installation.

The council warned the roads commission that "in the near future the county will request the State Road Commission to assume all cost of installation and maintenance of these and all other traffic signals on State highways in the county."

Arlington Rats Put at 120,000

Arlington County may not know it, but it has more than 120,000 rats.

That estimate which was described as "conservative," was given yesterday as a three-day seminar on rat control opened in Arlington's Health Department.

The seminar is being attended by 40 men from northern Virginia. After the course, they will serve as key specialists in rodent control in their respective communities.

Instructors at the seminar are: John C. Jones, biologist for the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service; A. R. Kinney, a training specialist for the United States Public Health Service, and Rowland E. Dorer, rodent control expert for the Virginia State Department of Health.

The estimate on the number of county rats came from Kinney, who said most experts agreed there is at least one rat for each person in the average community—which would give Arlington its 120,000 rat population.

Kinney pointed out that rats need a balanced diet, are nonmigratory unless shoved around, will organize to do a job, and, like man, "will attack their own kind."

He cautioned that rats are "cunning and suspicious," and "the most difficult of animals to trap." He added that rat-controllers must adopt a "flexible approach" to rats to succeed.

Biologist Jones later explained one reason for the abundance rats have attained throughout the world. Unhindered, he said, a male and female rat can produce 350,000,000 offspring in three years.

Burglar Gets Clothes To Wear When Dead

Chicago, Dec. 8 (AP).—The burglar who stole two men's suits out of a parked car last night probably wouldn't want to be caught dead in them. They're burial garments.

Charles Meure, a dress salesman for the Estelle Dress Co., said the burglar also got 33 women's burial dresses, valued at $300.

Another Picture Idea . . .

Most of us don't look as snappy as this couple in our hunting togs, and photographers hereabouts would have to use pheasants of the stuffed variety, for there are none of those birds in the woods and fields of this area. But we still have plenty of beautiful fall and winter scenery to make pictures along this general line. It's another idea for picture subjects

Use Gift Wrapper to Print Photo Greeting

By Ollie Atkins

AN EASY and unusual way to produce photographic Christmas greetings was shown to me the other day by a freelance photographer in New York. No negative is necessary and materials to make individualized cards are at every Christmas wrapping goods counter.

Select a translucent gift wrapping paper with seasonal sketches of Santa and his reindeer or, maybe, patterns of carol singers. An unlimited assortment of designs is at your disposal. This will be your negative. Do not fold the paper. You will need just enough to cover the entire printing surface of your contact printer.

Lay the entire sheet across your printer with the back side of the paper up; thus the developed image on your print will appear exactly as it is on the face of the paper. Select a complete design to appear on what will be the front of your greeting card.

If you have an 8x10 inch printer you can neatly fold thin matte paper twice to form conveniently sized 4x5 inch cards. Print the entire surface of the large print and fold after it is processed and dry. Most home darkroom printers are 5x7 inches, so plan on a single fold making the finished card 5x3½. Before producing any odd-shaped greetings, be certain you can get envelopes to accommodate them at your stationery store. Ask for photographic masking tape (it is black and blocks all light) at your camera shop and you can make the prints any size you desire. For those who have small 4x5 printers, I suggest they use double weight matte printing paper which will not require folding.

For added decor get a few of those metallic stars or seals saying "Merry Christmas," which you mount (be sure you put them on the paper negative UPSIDE DOWN or they will read in reverse on your print) with glue onto the wrapping paper.

Not only will your print produce the entire decoration of the holiday paper and your added effects of the "Merry Christmas" seals, but the texture of the paper itself will print through, lending a background pattern very desirable.

Exposure will run a bit long. You will have to experiment to get the correct timing. Contrast of your printing paper will likely be in grades 3 or 4, with No. 5 required for extreme cases.

This weekend is your last chance to get the cards out of the idea stage if you expect to have them delivered this Christmas.

MOST OF THE local department stores not only have old St. Nick on duty now, but feature well-lighted pictures made with high-speed stroboscopic lights of the bewhiskered gent holding your youngster in his lap or in the front seat of his sleigh. I have seen some of the results and they look good, with average cost of $2 for the first picture.

Shoppers still have plenty of time to get Christmas gifts in the photographic line. Alvin Epstein has sent me a copy of the Lubar Camera Corner gift manual, which, like the Brenner catalog, is full of suggestions for Santa to examine.

Representatives of Washington camera clubs will meet tonight at the Mercury Press offices, 1339 Green ct. nw., to make further preparations for the forthcoming International Salon of Photography.

An exhibition of pictorial photographs by Dominic Chiesa of San Francisco is showing all this month at the Smithsonian National Museum.

NOTICE: The final issue for 1948, Quarterly Supplement No. 38, of Henry Lester's Photo-Lab-Index is just out. I find that the printed instructions to remove all sectional indexes are in error. Instructions to remove pages 21-01, 21-01a, 21-01b should read 21-00, 21-00a, 21-00b.

The Eighth Annual Photo Exhibit of the Fotocraft Club will be held the week of January 23. All prints for hanging must be submitted to the exhibit committee of the club on or before January 20. Prints from nonmembers may be left at the desk or mailed to the Fotocraft Club, Y. M. C. A., 1816 12th st. nw. Prints and packing must be carefully labeled with the name, address and telephone number of the sender. Prints must be in monochrome, 8 by 10 inches or larger, mounted on standard salon mounts. Color prints will be accepted for exhibit only.

William Nagel of Ansco and Harvey Mohr of the photo section, Department of Agriculture, will select honor slides at a color slide exhibit of the Old Dominion Camera Club next Monday at 8 p. m in the Buckingham Community Bldg., 313 North Glebe rd., Arlington. Visitors are welcome.

Beginning with the January-February, 1949, issue, The Ansconian, Ansco's trade journal, sent to nearly all portrait studios, will have a "new look." It will have four extra pages, new type faces and change in format.

Intended for use by professional and serious amateur photographers who print a large number of pictures at one time, two new darkroom accessories—Kodak Rubber Deep Trays and the Kodak Stirring Paddle have been announced.

The deep trays come in 16 by 20 and 20 by 24 inch sizes. They are 6 inches deep and straight-sided to permit close placement in darkroom sinks. The stirring paddles are made of colorful yellow Tenite.

One on the Aisle—

Very Raw Meat, But Stimulating

By Richard L. Coe

AS ITS TITLE shoutingly proclaims, "Kiss the Blood Off My Hands" is a grim and violent melodrama about sudden death and the curative effects of love. Keith's new film is excellently played by Joan Fontaine, Burt Lancaster and Robert Newton, but it's made for those who, when ordering roast beef, snap, "Make it rare."

The story, from a novel by England's Gerald Butler, concerns a war-embittered veteran who pops off at anyone who gives him trouble. He skipped ship, wound up in foggy London, and when the pubkeeper called "Time, gentlemen, time," one night, he let out with a right to the jaw. The pubkeeper fell to the floor, hit his head on something and was killed instantly.

The picture begins with Lancaster's chilling chase from the pub. He pries into the room of a lonely, pretty nurse, Miss Fontaine. Somehow she shields him and gradually they become friends. But he's still got a chip on his shoulder and his temper explodes all over again in a railway coach. The girl even forgives this, gets him a job as a truck driver for her clinic.

Just when he seems to be straightening out, a bad penny turns up again, Robert Newton, who witnessed the death of the pubkeeper.

For hush money, Newton proposes that Lancaster make it easy for his cohorts to steal priceless drugs from the clinic truck. Fate prevents this. When Newton goes to try the same trick of blackmail on Miss Fontaine, she stabs him. And for a while it looks as though the lovers will escape to Portugal.

As you can see, this is sordid stuff, but it's extremely well done, thanks to Director Norman Foster and his trio of stars. There's a flogging scene, which seems to me quite needless for its sheer brutality, but it's unnecessary to assure you that the picture is well within the letter of the Production Code. The excitement is there aplenty and the script makes the mental turmoil of the two lovers wholly evident. That the love of one person for another can ease the misery of loneliness and eventually "Kiss the Blood Off My Hands" becomes the theme of a picture which would otherwise have nothing but shocking violence.

Butler's novel has been adapted by Ben Maddow and Walter Bernstein, author of many a wartime yarn in "Yank." Leonardo Bercovici's dialogue is often taut and the players do very well by the accent on realism.

Brooding and raw, "Kiss the Blood Off My Hands" is not a picture for your great-aunt from Dubuque. Me? I liked it.

TONIGHT'S the night for that musical amalgamation benefitting the Junior Police and Citizens Corps drive against juvenile delinquency . . . This goes on at Uline Arena at 8:30, with Mike Hunnicutt as emcee, Howard Williams and his orchestra, Johnny Bradford and Jean Warner of video, Nan Garcia, Charlie Keaton, Tommy Randolph, Dell Ludwig, Rique Casino and the Pentagon Choral Society . . . Do you suppose the latter sings in harmony, if not in unison?

"KISS THE BLOOD OFF MY HANDS," Universal-International release produced by Richard Vernon. Adapted from novel of Gerald Butler by Ben Maddow and Walter Bernstein. Screen play by Leonardo Bercovici. Additional dialogue by Hugh Gray. Directed by Norman Foster. At Keith's.

HAVEN—Both lonely, Joan Fontaine and Burt Lancaster find peace and turmoil in each other in Keith's melodrama, "Kiss the Blood Off My Hands"

'Lucia' a Mildly Enjoyable Trifle

IN "Make Way for Lucia," which is playing Ford's Theater, Baltimore, this week prior to New York, Playwright John Van Druten, the Theater Guild and two skilled players—Isabel Jeans and Cyril Ritchard—are recreating a world that never had a worry.

The comedy is like that pink cotton candy you get at the circus. Not a line of it is memorable, but Lucinda Ballard's costumes and settings of rural England in 1912, and the skilled gifts of the two stars in making something pleasant out of nothing, I found thoroughly enjoyable.

Speaking critically, I'm out on a limb. The Baltimore boys and the Washington reviewers have all sniffed at it as inconsequential and, what's worse, a bit dull. But Tuesday night's audience evidently enjoyed this trifle from the E. F. Benson stories in much the way I did. When it's all over, you've little to remember except that you've been in a world which knew nothing of atoms, airplanes, strikes or pumpkins. It is rather a daring attempt in this day of smashes and boffos, but I, for one, welcome it.

Van Druten is telling how a frothy widow settles down in a small English village and gets an old friend to propose marriage. An entrenched resident doesn't like her, which provides the slight plot.

Granted, Van Druten's lines are not as amusing as they might be, but, then, what's wrong with quiet conversation, especially with Miss Jeans and Ritchard to deliver it? These two tony comics are a treat.

Throwing the play out of gear is the miscasting of Catherine Willard as the fly in Lucia's ointment. Why anyone with so obviously an American style and accent is cast with two such opposites is one of those casting mysteries no one ever explains. Miss Willard plays well, but she is acting in a quite different style, apart from giving the role the contrast demanded by the script.

Miss Ballard's costumes and settings are wonderful—Mary Petty drawings brought to life, particularly in her creations for the maid, which Cherry Hardy plays in captivating style. Viola Roache, Philip Tonge and Ivan Simpson are some of the other players, but it is Miss Jeans and Ritchard who set the authentic pace.

It would be pleasant to think that so unassuming a little trifle as this had a chance in the hurly-burly of our hit-or-miss threater.

Methodist Women Support Civil Rights

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., Dec. 8 (U.P.).—Methodist women are united in a program for world betterment and peace, and the safeguarding of human freedoms, Thelma Stevens, Christian Social Relations executive secretary, told the annual meeting of the Methodist Church Board of Missions and Church Extensions today.

The four-year, seven-point program calls for activites by church women to strengthen the moral forces of the world, and to safeguard human freedoms by having recommendations of the presidentian committee on civil rights enacted into law, she said.

H. Conwell Snoke, Philadelphia attorney, was named treasurer of the division of home missions and church extensions, succeeding Dr. William J. Elliott, 70, Philadelphia. Dr. Elliott, who served as treasurer for 30 years, reached the retirement age.

Dr. Ralph Diffendorfer, head of the division of foreign missions, told how Chinese Communists hamper or close churches in their areas of China.

Dr. Earl R. Brown of New York, executive secretary of home missions and church extension, told the 200 board members yesterday the Methodists must establish one new church a day for the next four years to keep pace with the population shift.

Claim 40,321 Churches

The Methodists today claim 40,321 churches in the United States and its territories with a total membership of 9,089,943.

Dr. Brown said a minimum of 1461 new churches must be established and built by the end of 1951.

"In short," he asserted in his annual report, "the Methodist Church in the United States and outpost missions is faced with the necessity of advancing or losing ground. Any failure to go forward is a backward journey."

Dr. Brown said many areas of the Nation's cities and nearby suburbs "are underchurched."

To solve this problem, he declared, Methodists must: 1. Establish at least a thousand new urban churches; 2. Lift all city churches to the minimum level of effective strength—500 members; 3. Double church-school enrollment.

Foreign Service Changes

The State Department announced yesterday the following changes in the foreign service:

Emory Coblentz Swank of Brunswick, Md., from Shanghai to Tsingtao as vice consul.

William P. Wright of the the Northumberland Apartments, Washington, D. C., from Canton, China, to the State Department.

BPW President Believes Women Decided '48 Election

Dr. K. Frances Scott, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, believes women voters decided the recent election, and that it's high time somebody set out to prove it.

She stated her views in an interview yesterday afternoon at a tea in her honor given by the District BPW chapter as part of its twenty-first anniversary celebration.

"Women played a far greater role in the Democratic victory than any of the experts has publicly surmised," she observed, "and I think any scientific effort to determine the exact extent of the women voters' influence would be well spent.

"Up to now, all of the election anaylses I have seen have dwelt at length on the farm and labor vote, ignoring completely—or nearly so—what I believe to be the factor that turned the tide—the women's vote.

"At least, more women turned out to cast their votes and to ring doorbells than in any previous election, and we should receive our full share of credit for that."

The affable doctor, who is assistant professor of hygiene at Smith College, came to Washington to attend the District Business and Professional Women's anniversary celebration Tuesday night at the Shoreham Hotel. It's her first official visit to the local chapter since she was elected to the presidency last summer at the national convention in Fort Worth, Tex.

Receiving with the guest of honor was Miss Genevieve Rogers, District BPW president, and member of the national board.

Patterson Will Case Deposition Sealed

A second pre-trial deposition will be "sealed" in the court fight over the will of the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, attorneys said yesterday.

The new deposition was taken from Archie Robert Lye, former butler of Mrs. Patterson. Attorneys for executors named in the will began questioning him on Tuesday, and attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, daughter of Mrs. Patterson and challenger of the will, completed cross-examination of Lye yesterday.

Executors' attorneys said the transcript of Lye's questioning will be sealed from public view by mutual agreement with Mrs. Gizycka's attorneys. The earlier sealed deposition was taken from Mrs. Gizycka, which attorneys said might involve material of a "scandalous" nature if disclosed at this time. Sealed depositions can later be opened by court order.

On Friday, the executors' attorneys announced, they plan to take a deposition from Joseph Miller, also a former butler for Mrs. Patterson.

Annual Meeting

Refrigerating Group Elects B. H. Jennings

The American Society of Refrigerating Engineers yesterday elected Burgess H. Jennings, of the Northwestern Technological Institute, Evanston, Ill., president for the 1949 term.

In concluding action at its forty-fourth annual meeting, held at the Statler Hotel, the society also chose the following officers:

John G. Bergdoll, York Corporation, York, Pa., first vice president; Edward Simons, engineering consultant, San Francisco, second vice president; Paul B. Christensen, Merchants Refrigeration Co. New York City, treasurer, and M. O. Turpin of the society's New York offices, secretary.

The meeting attended by more than 800 members from throughout the United States, wound up the four-day session yesterday with presentation of several technical papers.

Lumber Mills Feel Price Cut

A sharp drop in lumber prices in the last 60 days has caused mills to curtail operations, lumbermen reported yesterday in their annual convention at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mill prices have dropped from 20 to 25 per cent, C. W. Ingham, president of the West Coast's Lumbermen's Association told reporters, with production of lower grade lumber especially hard hit.

At the same time, the Commerce and Labor Departments reported that building activity in November fell 146 million dollars below the October level. It still was 127 million dollars above November, 1947.

November's building activity, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported, totaled $1,559,000,000. For the seventh consecutive month, more than two million workers—or 2,150,000—were employed.

The National Lumber Manufacturers Association yesterday elected A. J. Glassow of Bend, Oreg., president for a new term of one year.

Other officers elected were: H. M. Seaman of Houston, Tex., first vice president; John B. Veach of Washington, D. C., vice president and treasurer; Homer B. Jamison of Fresno, Calif., vice president; C. W. Ingham of Marcola, Oreg., vice president; Omar Hilton of Warren, Ark., vice president; R. A. Colgan, jr., of Washington, D. C., executive vice president, and Henry Bahr of Washington, D. C., secretary.

Author Shows Old 'Hatfield' Musket With 22 Notches

Author Virgil Carrington Jones showed a hillbilly musket with 22 notches on its barrel at the Book Fair of the Arts Club of Washington, 2017 I st. nw., yesterday to illustrate his talk on his book, "The Hatfields and the McCoys."

The musket was carried in the hand of a Hatfield as he swam across a river in search of a McCoy, Jones said. But the McCoy stopped him as he swam, with a shot from the opposite bank, he added.

Author Jones told an audience of 50 persons of the troubles he had getting the feuding mountaineers to talk to him of their long history of strife.

At the evening session mystery writer Patricia McGerr, 28, former reporter for the American Road Builders Association in Washington, told how detective story plots are born.

In her three mysteries, Miss McGerr has used three original plots. In her first book, "Pick Your Victim," readers knew the murderer but not the victim. In her second book, "The Seven Deadly Sisters," readers knew a murder had been committed but did not know the identity of either the murderer or the victim. And in her third book, "Catch Me If You Can," the murderer tries to find out who the detective is.

Israeli Law Studied Here

The Israeli government's proposed constitution for the new Jewish state sets up a parliament of less than 100 members, provides for a strong prime minister and makes the president a figurehead, it was learned last night.

A copy of the constitution reached Washington several days ago from Tel Aviv, for information of the Israeli mission and American legal experts.

Inspection of the document disclosed it set up the framework for a Socialist state, abolishes the death penalty, and goes beyond any existing document of its kind—including the United States Constitution—in setting forth basic human rights.

In the making more than a year, it combines aspects of American, French and British systems of government with some of the fundamentals of ancient Jewish law, and applies the result to a modern industrial democracy.

Otherwise, it separates church and state. It guarantees free access to Palestine's holy places, establishes freedom of worship for all sects, and draws no distinction among Jews, Moslems or Christians in their rights as citizens. The proposed constitution, is a draft, subject to change. It will be the working document for the constitutional assembly to be held in Israel following elections scheduled for January 25.

A Friendly Suggestion

Good prewar Kentucky Bourbon whiskies of 6 and 8 years old are very scarce. Their scarcity is the result of whiskies not being produced during most of the war years. Practically all pre-war whiskies have been consumed with the result that prewar good bonded Kentucky Bourbons will be extremely limited next year.

NOTE: Our last shipment of 6 and 8-year-old Kentucky's best bonded bourbons for this year are now in our warehouse. We suggest you buy an extra bottle or case now for future use.

Oldest D. C. Haberdasher Quits Tonight

The oldest active haberdasher in Washington, who estimates he has sold 100,000 suits of clothes during his 84 years, will retire tonight at a testimonial dinner given by the American Business Association at the Hotel 2400.

Hecht

Arthur R. Hecht of 1922 1st st. ne., began selling clothes and men's furnishings in Baltimore 65 years ago. He has outlived every store he ever worked for, except Frederick's Men's Wear Store, 701 H st. ne., where today he waits patiently for the testimonial dinner and the train that will carry him to Florida for the rest of his life.

For Hecht, the function will be the fourth testimonial dinner at which he has been the guest of honor. He is always asked, he said yesterday, to reminisce about the days when suits cost only $15 with an extra pair of pants.

When Hecht moved from his native Baltimore to Washington in 1890, there were no clothing racks. Suits were piled on broad tables. Customers were easier to fit and tastes were more conservative.

But to Hecht, the clothing business has always been work. Today he would rather talk of his hobby, ballroom dancing, which his doctor forced him to stop only two years ago.

Like another more famous haberdasher, Hecht lists the "Missouri Waltz" as the best song ever written, and his face lights up as he thinks of the ballroom floors on which he has danced to that tune.

Saturday nights, he said, he would work until 9, then help his brother-in-law, John K. Munroe, who had a paper route delivering The Washington Post, and with whom he now lives, and then at midnight set out in search of ballroom dancing.

"I danced every night in my prime," he admitted with pride.

D. C. Rotary Club Urged to Practice Unselfish Living

The advice came from Rilea W. Doe of Oakland, Calif., vice president of Safeway Stores, Inc., who addressed a luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club at Hotel Mayflower. Some 300 attended.

Doe, a member of the 1949 Rotary convention committee and a former District governor of the organization, pointed out that one's life is enriched by "what we give." He advocated "service" to one's fellows and the community.

Communism Hurt By Marshall Plan, Exiled Peter Says

New York, Dec. 8 (NYHT).—Communism is "declining" due to Marshall Plan aid to Europe, according to exiled King Peter of Yugoslavia, but he does not approve of similar assistance for his own country. Such action would only strengthen Marshal Tito, Peter said upon his arrival in New York today aboard the Queen Mary.

Concerning Tito's fight with the Cominform the youthful monarch doubted that Tito has broken with the Soviet Union.

Peter said Tito's position was "very precarious."

President's Expense Allowance May Be Raised by $25,000

The President's expense allowance would be raised $25,000 a year—from $30,000 to $55,000—under a recommendation of the Hoover Commission.

Former President Herbert C. Hoover can be expected to unveil the plan officially next Tuesday when he testifies before the Senate Civil Service Committee on higher salaries for Federal executives.

It isn't generally known, but the President must use part of his $75,000 salary to pay some of the White House's operating costs. The proposed increased expense allowance is designed to pay all of these bills to leave the $75,000 salary, minus taxes, for the President's own use.

As revealed here, the commission first agreed to recommend that the President's salary be doubled. However, it was pointed out that a $150,000 salary would put the President in a higher tax bracket, leaving him with little more "take-home" pay than he now has.

In the talk stage, it's reported, is a suggestion that the $2500 expense allowance of members of Congress be raised and that Cabinet members and a few other high officials also be given expense allowances. No legitimate expense accounts are taxable.

CAA: How the reorganization of the Civil Aeronautics Administration will affect its 1500 employes here will be explained in detail at a mas meeting tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. in the departmental auditorium. Administrator Delos W. Rentfel will personally give his employes the facts.

The three big CAA officers to be revamped are Safety, Airports, and Federal Airways. CAA has been full of rumors that the Safety division was to be scuttled and half of its employes fired. This is the story:

Its medical division will be cut on paper from 36 to 4, but the remaining 32 employes are to be transferred to a new and consolidated research division under Al Koch. The engine inspection service also is wiped out on paper, but its employes and functions are to be transferred to field offices. Actually, fewer than 10 employes in the Safety unit will lost their jobs because of the reshuffle.

It's the announced intention of the administrator to transfer operating functions to the agency's field offices and to concentrate solely on policy and programming at headquarters here. That means, of course, that a number of people here in operating jobs will be asked to transfer out of the city.

CAA has about 17,000 employes and Rentzel hopes that number can be cut and money can be saved by the streamlining. However, it's a good bet that Caas will ask Congress for a record size budget, mainly to build airports.

STATE: It won't be required to absorb the costs of the recent $330 pay raise for its employes like many other Federal agencies. The department has had its staff slashed by Congress for the past several years and its 1950 budget, it's reported, will provide funds for a few additional jobs.

LOBBYISTS: There's a lot of talk on Capitol Hill of holding a full-dress investigation of the many lobbyists in this city and their activities. You'd think the mere talk would make the lobbyists and their clients a bit wary.

Perhaps it has. But a Pittsburgh public relations firm has just registered at Capitol Hill and it revealed it's being paid the fattest salary by far of any registered lobbyist. Its fee is an eye-opening $132,000-a-year—$11,000 a month plus all expenses. The firm will try to get Congress to pass a price system that will benefit steel concerns.

NOTES: Virgil Almond has retired from the Budget Bureau after 34 years of hard work for Uncle Sam. He's going back to Bowling Green, Ky., to operate a dairy farm . . . The half holiday order for December 24 definitely includes the General Accounting Office, Government Printing Office, the Navy Yard, and other agencies in the metropolitan area. In other words, just about every Federal worker will have that afternoon off . . . At the Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, civilian employes have been ordered to use entrances other than the main entrance and through the lobby. On paper, the reason for it is to reduce traffic.

INTERIOR: Awards for economy suggestions have been given to these employes of the Bureau of Land Management: Maybel G. Clifford, Andrew H. Dedeaux, Rose M. Beall, Theresa A. Tims, Joseph C. Thoma, and Franz S. Blue.

EXAM: College seniors and graduates are applying for the junior management assistant exam which is now open. This test is a part of the junior professional assistant and the junior agricultural assistant exams which will be withdrawn on December 21.

The National Institute of Public Affairs suggested to Civil Service that the JPA, JAA, and the JMA exams be held in an effort to recruit talented young people for the Federal service. The institute is urging college seniors and graduates to apply for the test.

The JMA exam will be used to recruit people for general administration, budget and personnel work. Applicants will be given both written and oral exams.

Charter Battle In Montgomery To Start Today

For 2 Killers

Lawyer Seeks 13th Stay of Death Today

Undismayed by another setback before the Supreme Court, Attorney James J. Laughlin today will launch a new attempt to save two condemned killers from the electric chair Friday.

The men are Reginald J. Wheeler, 28, and Jesse James Patton, 23, who were found guilty in November, 1946, of fatally shooting Maurice L. Bernstein during a holdup in Bernstein's drug store.

Laughlin will file a petition in District Court today for a writ of habeas corpus, which will cite a provision under Title 23, Section 703, of the District code that, he contends, makes it mandatory that there be at least a 10-day period between sentencing and execution.

Although Wheeler and Patton were originally sentenced two years ago, they have since that time received 12 stays of execution.

They were taken into District Court Tuesday to hear sentence imposed for the thirteenth time. The court ordered the executions to be held Friday.

The petition will say that since the sentence was originally imposed it was stayed from time to time and on Tuesday was modified to provide for execution Friday and a certified copy of the new judgment was forwarded to the superintendent of the District Jail.

It will say that "since less than three days intervened, the statutory requirement was not met and the judgment under which they are now held is void."

Earlier yesterday, Wheeler and Patton, who won a stay last Friday only 21 minutes before the official deadline for their execution, lost another round in the Supreme Court when for the third time the court denied their appeals.

Appeals Indicated By Both Sides From Decision Of Circuit Court

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

First-round arguments on legality of a scheduled January 6 charter council election in Montgomery County will open today at 1:30 p. m. in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville.

The court fight will center around the question raised by four county councilmen (former commissioners), all Republicans, on whether the special election conflicts with the Maryland Constitution.

A constitutional provision specifies that elections shall be held on a quadrennial basis, making the next one in 1950. Charter supporters have held the provision does not apply to the county's charter government.

As both sides readied their arguments last night, both indicated appeal to higher courts of the lower court ruling if is unfavorable to them.

Speedy Decision Expected

If the four councilmen win their suit, election for the council, the first under the charter adopted in a referendum November 2, may be delayed until 1950.

The seven councilmen to be elected January 6, if the election plans are upheld, would take office January 10. Courts, therefore, are expected to expedite the hearings and ultimate decisions.

In a blast at the Montgomery County charter committee, which fought for the new charter form of government, County Councilman Wesley I. Sauter, in other developments yesterday, accused the group of "very undemocratic methods in handpicking its own slate of candidates."

Criticizing the committee for indorsing only seven candidates for the seven-member council, Sauter commented: "They might at least have chosen two persons for each post and let the people have a little latitude in naming their leaders."

Both the Republican and Democratic Parties have declined to put out a council ticket.

A pledge to support the charter committee's ticket, however, has been made by the county Democratic organization.

Three Independents in Race

Three independents, besides the seven charter committee candidates, have entered the race. Deadline for filing petitions of candidacy is Monday midnight.

Election officials, meanwhile, explained the petition nominating procedure.

Ward W. Caddington, clerk to the board of elections supervisors, said each candidate must submit a petition bearing at least 500 signatures of qualified voters. Each signature will be checked for authenticity against voters' lists, he emphasized.

Loyalty Board Chief Reports Few Suspects

Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the President's Loyalty Review Board, last night said less than one tenth of 1 per cent of the 2,300,000 Federal employes checked by his boards and the FBI have been "set aside for further investigation."

Richardson

Of this total of about 7300, he said, any "suspicion" the Government may have about their loyalty "lies right on their own front doorstep."

At present there are 35 cases which await final disposition, he said, and remarked, "I wouldn't be surprised if half of them weren't acquitted of any suspicion of disloyalty."

The former assistant attorney general, and chief counsel for Congressional Pearl Harbor hearings, spoke before the Washington Chapter of the American Society for Public Administration at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

During a spirited round of questioning from his audience, Richardson said he felt one of the chief dangers of the loyalty program "is that the line between a radical and a Communist will not be found."

"In that situation lies the hysterical side which, when out of control, very easily can punish those with whom one may disagree politically."

Richardson said he had supported suggestions that persons who are investigated and heard by the review boards and then cleared of suspicion be given clearance through publicity.

The board chairman expressed a "lingering hope" that the President will dissolve the board on the basis of the small number of persons under suspicion, saying: "If that's all the fish you can catch, that's enough."

High Court Gets Marzani Freedom Plea

The Supreme Court yesterday was asked to set aside the conviction of Carl Aldo Marzani, sentenced to one to three years for concealing Communist affiliations while he was an employe of the State Department.

Attorney Allan R. Rosenberg told the court Marzani's denial of Communist ties were made during an "informal chat" with a State Department superior, barring him from prosecution under the False Claims Act.

He further argued that the trial court which convicted the Italian-born former Office of Strategic service worker, used a "unique standard" in the trial and "restricted us in important and serious ways."

Marzani, discharged from the State Department "in the interest of the United States" in 1946, was originally convicted on 11 counts of making false statements to the Government.

Now free on $2500 bond, he succeeded in having nine of the counts dismissed by the United States Court of Appeals under the statute of limitations.

Defense's opening argument yesterday centered on the remaining two charges. They involve a conversation Marzani had with Anthony J. Panuch, then deputy to the Assistant Secretary of State, in which Marzani denied having been connected with the Communist Party.

Counsel argued that evidence in the first nine counts is "not relevant to the last two." If it was, Rosenberg said, Marzani was not given sufficient "precautionary notice" that he might be violating a law in his conversation with Panuch when he further denied Communist ties.

[The talk between Panuch and Marzani concerned a request for Marzani's resignation "for security reasons."]

Rosenberg, in charging evidence was excluded from the trial, said the presence of nine Negroes on the jury made the trial court "apprehensive" that the jury "couldn't handle evidence of an inflammatory nature" as a "representative jury" could.

Morgan Case

Five Numbers Suspects Go On Trial Here

The Sam Morgan numbers ring case went on trial yesterday in District Court.

The case is the result of police investigation here and in nearby Maryland over a period of several weeks. Trial is by jury before Judge Edward M. Curran.

Defendants are Sam Morgan, 42, of 705 Wayne ave., Silver Spring, Md.; Beatrice Campbell, 39, of 1634 4th st. nw.; Jency Garrett, 41, 611 Acker st. ne.; Otis James, 28, 411 E st. ne., and William A. Brown, 30, 52 L st. nw. The case against co-defendant Mary Charles, 31, 70 Rhode Island ave. nw., was dismissed because of illegal arrest.

In his opening address, Assistant United States Attorney Joseph J. Lawless said police trailed the defendants to various places in Washington and Maryland. In many instances, Miss Campbell, the alleged pickup woman, left establishments with paper bags which were turned over to Morgan, who went with the suspects into a tavern in southern Maryland, it was said.

Elderly Woman's Clothed Body Found in Bathtub

The fully clothed body of an 83-year-old woman was found late yesterday in a bathtub filled with water at 1603 Kenilworth ave. ne.

Police identified the woman as Mrs. Grace E. Parent, and said her body was discovered at about 4:30 p. m. by other persons living in the house.

Homicide squad detectives and the coroner's office launched investigations of the death, and Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald ordered the body taken to the morgue for an autopsy today.

Police said a note found on a bedroom dresser indicated Mrs. Parent planned to take her life.

According to police, the woman had lived in the house for 11 years. The house was sold by its owner

38 Million Is Austerity Plan, Strayer Says

Dr. George D. Strayer last night described his 38 million dollar recommendation for new school construction as "an austerity program."

A "desirable program" would cost an additional 20 million, he stated in a broadcast over station WRC.

Dr. Strayer said his report on school needs prepared for Congress will correct only the worst conditions.

"It will relieve overcrowding, end part-time instruction, and provide safe and healthful surroundings," he explained.

Dr. Strayer estimated that if the money is appropriated immediately it will take five years to complete construction.

The need for further building will depend on the increase in the number of school pupils, and the shift in population resulting from the development of new areas.

The District probably will have to embark on a new school building program by 1957 or 1958, he predicted.

Mrs. E. M. Nelson Is Indorsed for School Board

Mrs. E. M. Nelson, active Parent-Teachers Association worker and wife of Dr. E. M. Nelson, chief of the Vitamin Division of the Department of Agriculture, was indorsed last night for appointment to the Board of Education by the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

Mrs. Nelson, a member of the citizens group, lives at 1830 Jackson st. ne. The meeting was held at 2004 Rhode Island ave. ne.

The association appointed a nominating committee headed by Dr. Freeman Weiss to submit a slate of officers for election at the January meeting. An auditing committee headed by J. A. Duerksen was elected to audit books of the financial secretary-treasurer and to submit a report at the January meeting.

Murphy Plans New Fire Boxes For All Schools

Chief Estimates Cost of System He Opposed Will Be Near $150,000

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Fire Chief Clement Murphy is making plans for installation of "remote control" fire alarm boxes in all District schools, he disclosed last night.

His department is preparing specifications covering the boxes and these should be ready for bids in a week, he said. Present plans are for an initial order of 150 boxes to provide replacements for schools now equipped with street-type boxes, for buildings without either type and for proposed school structures.

Murphy, who strongly opposed selection of this particular type box, said the District Commissioners' vote in favor of the "remote control" box was considered "a directive" to install them.

The chief estimated total cost of the installations, including the time spent by his men and those in the office of Supt. of Communications Herbert A. Friede, would be about $150,000.

He said catalogs show the boxes will cost from $215 to $225 each. Preliminary study indicates two firms may be able to supply this type of box, he explained. Street-type boxes, which the chief recommended, cost about $140 each and the District has 200 on hand, he said yesterday.

During the week, Chief Murphy expects to study various modifications of the "remote control" type mentioned in the closed hearing before the District Commissioners Tuesday. If these are incorporated in the specifications the total cost will be even higher, he said.

The question of how the fire alarm box installations are to be financed will be placed before the Commissioners after estimates of the total cost are available, Chief Murphy indicated yesterday.

The Commissioners approved installation of the "remote control" type boxes by a 2-to-1 vote. Principal supporter for the type was Friede.

D. C. Firemen Ask Funds for 60-Hour Week

A deficiency appropriation to provide funds to implement a 60-hour week for Washington firemen was requested last night by Local 36 of the International Association of Firefighters (AFL).

The union adopted a resolution requesting Fire Chief Clement Murphy and District Commissioners to ask Congress for the deficiency appropriation as soon as Congress convenes.

The resolution noted that Public Law 669 passed last summer by the Eightieth Congress provides the 60-hour week to become effective six months after necessary funds are appropriated.

The money has never been appropriated and firemen still work a 72-hour week, it was pointed out.

The association, meeting at the Independent Order of Odd Fellows Hall, 419 7th st. nw., also adopted a resolution protesting that two Negro sergeants, who received noncompetitive promotions from private, were allowed to take competitive examinations for lieutenant last October.

All of last night's voting, by members of the platoon working days this week, must be confirmed by the night workers at another meeting next Wednesday to become official.

Capt. L. F. Price, president of the local, announced that the union's legislative program to be sought from the new Congress will include a request for a cost-of-living bonus of $330 retroactive to July, when Federal employes received a similar bonus.

Plans are being worked out, he said, to ask also for additional raises that would bring the total increase from $800 to $1000 annually.

Also included in the program, he said, will be a request to raise widow's pensions from $60 a month to $125 for widows of men killed on duty, and $100 for widows of firemen who die of natural causes.

Another provision, he said, would raise the pension age limit from 16 to 18 years for orphans of firemen and increase pensions of children under 16 from $10 to $25 a month.

A plan for reorganization of the District Fire Department Trial Board into three boards with functions similar to those recently established in the Police Department is scheduled to be presented to the District Commissioners today, it was disclosed last night.

The plan, prepared by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher, calls for appointment of the following boards:

1. A three-man Fire Trial Board consisting of three department officials with the rank of captain or above. The board will hear cases involving infraction of department rules resulting from charges by fire officials.

2. A three-man Special Fire Trial Board consisting of two fire officers with the rank of captain or above and a civilian member chosen from among local attorneys. The board will hear cases involving complaints by civilians against firemen.

3. A three-man Complaint Review Board consisting of District residents who will study complaints made by civilians, and which are considered of dubious nature by Fire Chief Clement Murphy. Area News in Brief

Pickpocket Suspect Held in $2000 Bond

Police said in Municipal Court they were looking for Burke's coworker who allegedly helped him in the jostle-jobs.

According to testimony, at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday aboard a streetcar at 7th and F sts. nw., Charles H. Ashton, of 901 N. Garfield st. Arlington, noticed his wallet was missing and saw two men rushing from the vehicle.

A similar thing happened, it was said, to two other victims, Benjamin Alexander, 75, of 1347 L st. nw., and Charles E. Hoover, 123 Rock Creek Church rd. nw.

Acquitted of Moonshining

Two brothers, Addie E. Dodson, 63, and Rufus M. Dodson, 58, both of Culpeper, Va., were acquitted in Federal District Court in Alexandria yesterday of charges of illegally owning and operating a still.

Russell Bowers, Addie Dodson's son-in-law, who reported the brothers to State police, "couldn't remember" yesterday whether the incriminating facts in a statement he made at the time of the arrest were true.

Bowers admitted, on the witness stand, that he had "a falling out" with the Dodsons the day before he reported them to police.

Safety Patrol Yule Party

Potato Rule Brings Suit

Suit was filed yesterday in District Court to void a Department of Agriculture order specifying the size of potatoes that may be shipped by commercial handlers from the State of Maine.

A group of the handlers ask an injunction to outlaw as arbitrary a November 11 regulation which says that for a seven-month period they can only ship potatoes of between 2¼ inches and 4 inches in diameter and of No. 1 grade. The order makes an exception, however, for Bliss Triumph variety spuds of No. 1 grade and over 1 7/8 inches in diameter.

Von Opel Suit Seeks Return Of $4,000,000

By The Associated Press

Fritz von Opel, son of a famous German automobile maker, reopened a legal battle yesterday to force the Government to return nearly 4 million dollars worth of property seized at the beginning of the war.

The suit, in United States District Court, is one of the five largest to come up as a result of seizures by the Alien Property Custodian.

Von Opel, 49, a German auto racer and sports enthusiast in the '20s, now claims to be a citizen of Liechenstein, 65-square-mile principality between Austria and Switzerland. He was interned in the United States during the war as a potentially dangerous enemy alien.

The properties involved include the Harvard Brewing Co., Lowell, Mass., and the Spur Distributing Co., Nashville, Tenn., which operates 254 filling stations in 21 States.

Uebersee Finanz Korporation, A. G., a holding company controlled by a Swiss trust, owns controlling interests in these firms. Uebersee was taken over by the Government in 1942 as the property of a foreign national.

Von Open, who bought Uebersee in the early '30s, has been attempting to get the properties returned to him since 1944. The case has been before the Supreme Court twice on questions of jurisdiction.

Von Opel, who bought Uebersee money he got from the sale to General Motors of stock in the Adam Opel Auto Works in Germany, then the largest automobile plant in Europe. He says the stock was a gift from his father, Wilhelm.

John L. Burling, Justice Department attorney, said the Government claims Fritz was only a front for Wilhelm, "a Nazi Party member," in the deal. He argued that the purported gift was a "sham" for the purpose of evading strict German currency regulations in Germany.

2 Named by Bar For Radio Station Case Prosecution

Baltimore, Dec. 8 (AP).—The Baltimore Bar Association today named two of its members to help prosecute contempt charges against five Baltimore radio stations and a news commentator.

The radio stations and the commentators were cited for stories they carried about the arrest of Eugene H. James, a handyman who subsequently was convicted and sentenced to death for the knife-slaying of 11-year-old Marsha Brill July 6. He was indicted in Washington, D. C., for the similar slaying of Carol Bardwell, also 11, nine days earlier in Rock Creek Park.

Postlude

Carols Sung By Lutheran Choral Group

By Paul Hume

Martin Luther played both flute and lute. He urged the extensive use of congregational singing, and believed stoutly in the value of group song as one form of divine praise.

Last night's concert by the National Lutheran Chorus reminded a Constitution Hall audience of traditions of singing which have flourished in that militant body of Christendom. Under the direction of R. E. Snesrud, the chorus sang chorales and various forms of Christmas carols. It was a happy occasion marked by some fine choral sound.

William Dawson's "Mary Had a Baby," was beautiful in words and music, with a harmonic freshness that set it apart from much seasonal writing. Something of the same feeling enriched Don Malin's treatment of an old English carol Everything the chorus sang emerged with careful notice of pitch and precision.

They might employ a less square method of phrasing, particularly in tender moments such as their one Bach choral. And their tone in forte passages tends toward a metallic sound. But it was frankly a time when those who love to sing together for no gain except in communal giving were able to offer their talent and labors to an appreciative audience.

Firm to Pay $5950 For Using Child Labor

The Government yesterday assessed a Butte, Mont., firm $5950 on its contract to ship $400,000 worth of gravied horsemeat to starving people in Europe.

The assessment wasn't based on any question about the quality of the meat, but on a Labor Department examiner's finding that the Montana Horse Products Co. employed underage girls to fill the order.

D. C. New Car Deliveries Off In November

By S. Oliver Goodman

November sales of new autos in Washington dropped to 2127, one of the lowest totals this year, according to the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

For the first 11 months, sales aggregated 26,110 units as compared with 23,995 in the same 1947 period and 14,016 in the like 1946 period.

February	1973	1425	225

Navy, Terps Play Football Again in '50

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THE FOOTBALL GAME I'd like to see, and happily I will, is the affair between the Chicago Bears and the Chicago Cardinals on Sunday at Wrigley Field, on the North Side. They're playing for the Western Division title in the National Football League, and you'd have to say the Cardinals have come a long way.

POVICH

For most of the last 20 years, the Cardinals have been the poor relations in Chicago's pro football strife, genuflecting to the Bears who have won eight Western Division championships and seven league titles. But last year the Cardinals came into their own, beat the Bears and went on to victory over the Philadelphia Eagles for their first league championship.

This one in Chicago Sunday ought to be a beaut. No longer are the Cardinals kowtowing to the power of the Bears. They can turn it on themselves, with perhaps the greatest running attack in the football business, with Charley Trippi, Elmer Angsman and Pat Harder toting the ball and succeeding to the rock-'em, sock-'em role of the Bears who used to awe the opposition with the threat of Nagurski, Osmanski, McAfee and Masterson operating behind that good, big, bad Bear line.

SMALL WONDER that 150,000 fans are trying to get into Wrigley Field that will accommodate only 51,000. This one could be epic, with the Bears tossing at the Cardinals the threat of Sid Luckman's passes. There has been a reversal in recent years. The Bears today are a passing team, not the power-laden outfit of former seasons, and against the Cardinals never did so much depehd on Luckman.

The Cardinals are not wanting in a passing attack of their own, however, with Paul Christman and Roy Mallouf in the quarterbacking job, and that brings up an interesting point. Despite the reputation and the prowess of Pitchin' Paul Christman, there are coaches in the league who will tell you that young Mallouf makes the Cardinal's aerial attack go better.

The Bears are the only club to knock the Cardinals off this season. They did that in a 28-17 game played earlier in the year, but who can say they will do it again. The Bears were knocked off later by the Eastern champions, the Philadelphia Eagles, a team that couldn't beat the Cardinals. The Cards will be the favorites Sunday.

SINCE 1920, when the Bears and Cardinals found themselves in the same league, the Cards have taken something of a shellacking from their North Side antagonists. They've beaten the Cardinals 36 times in 50 meetings, with six games being tied. But the Cardinals never were so well equipped to start evening the score as they are on this day of decision Sunday.

Despite the reputation of the Bears, they have no running back to match the skill of Charley Trippi, whose off-tackle slants and end-skirting dashes are the finest in the league. The transition from college ball to the pros was easy for Trippi, who in fact acted like a pro among collegians when he was playing for Wally Butts' Georgia team before, during and after the war.

I saw Trippi in the Sugar Bowl game against North Carolina on January 1, 1947, and there he was a thoroughbred, far above his class in college competition. There was never any doubt that he would make good with the pros. Jimmy Conzelman put his talents and the threat of his talents to good use with the Cardinals, and it has paid off handsomely. The finest player in college football is now the finest among the pros.

MUCH IS MADE of the fact that the Bears are three deep in $20,000-a-year quarterbacks, namely Luckman and Johnny Lujack and Bobby Layne, but George Halas can play them only one at a time. And when the chips are down, it has been obvious that the Bears find no adequate substitute for the veteran Luckman. To date, Lujack has been chiefly valued for his defensive proclivities and Layne hasn't quite made the grade.

As I was saying, the Bears apparently must go down the line with their passing attack in an attempt to outscore the ball-toting Cardinals. They have neither the line nor the smashing running attack of Jimmy Conzelman's team, which figures to control the ball for the greater part of the time on Sunday.

And the team that wins Sunday's game won't necessarily go on to the league championship because it will still have to beat the Eagles. That one, too, ought to be a beaut. Tommy Thompson, Steve Van Buren, Joe Muha and Al Wister et al., of the Eagles are not beaten until they are beaten, and the league title could come back to the East for the first time since 1942.

Mikan Gets 34, but Caps Win, 94-83, From Lakers

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 8.—Washington's Capitols showed why they are the leading team in the Basketball Association of America here Wednesday night as they spanked the Minneapolis Lakers, 94 to 83, before 9129.

Except for a brief spurt in the third period and another in the fourth, the game was never in doubt. Washington was the better club all night long.

George Mikan had one of his better-scoring nights as he dropped 34, but he was way off, if you can believe that. He had 10 field goals and 14 free throws, and he missed 20 other field goal attempts and 1 charity toss.

Bones McKinney dropped in 20 points, 17 of them coming in a huge 35-point splurge in the third period. Crooked-armed Bob Feerick was also a big help in the spurt which gave Washington its sixteenth victory against one defeat this year.

In the third period the Lakers came from a 17-point deficit to close the gap to 7 points at 70 to 63. Then Washington pulled away again before the Lakers spurted some more.

They came close again at 80 to 75, but they were through then. The Caps started pouring it on and they kept going and going.

Jim Pollard, the forward for the Lakers with the radar hands, dropped in 20 points as he tried to win the game almost single handedly in the third period. He connected eight of his points then.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 8 (AP).—The Nation's top golfers took final practice swings around the palm-lined Miami Springs course today in preparation for the twenty-fifth annual $10,000 Miami Open tournament starting tomorrow.

Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, Va., a 3-1 favorite to win first money of $2000 in the 72-hole test, shot an easy par 35-35—70 for the 6735-yard layout.

Defending Champion Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., tried out the course for the first time since he won the event with a record-tying 267 last December and came in with a 72. Demaret had a 2-under-par 69 at nearby Riviera course yesterday.

Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., showed the way in warmup rounds today with a 32, 33—65. Skip Alexander, Southern Pines, N. C.; Glen Teal, Jacksonville, Fla., and Johnny Revolta, Evanston, Ill., each carded 68s.

Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago matched Snead's 35, 35—70, as did Professionals Fred Haas, jr., New Orleans, runner-up last year; Chick Harbert, Northville, Mich., and Tony Penna, Deoray Beach, Fla. Lew Worsham of Washington had a 71.

West Wins From Jackson By Decision

Sonny Boy West caught up with the furiously back-pedalling Stonewall Jackson enough times to gain a unanimous 12-round decision last night at Uline Arena.

In all, their third meeting, again billed for the District lightweight championship, was an uninspiring affair. A month ago, West scored an eight-round knockout over Jackson after having lost a decision to him in Baltimore.

Fast-movng Stonewall, and practically all his moves were in reverse, did puzzle West early in the fight with his unorthodox windmill style. Later, West was able to connect, although he didn't land four good punches all the way.

In the final round, Jackson was dropped briefly, but pounced up immediately and took the automatic count of 8 standing.

About the only moment that was spectacular came in the sixth when Jackson found himself lying across the middle rope. Undaunted by his horizontal position, he kept swinging up at West. Both weighed 135 pounds.

Referee Harry Volkman gave West six rounds and called three even; Judge Joe Bunsa could see Jackson winning only the second and called three even; Dr. J. E. Trigg, the other judge, gave Jackson four and called two tossups.

There wasn't a knock down in the semi-windup scrap nor in any of the preliminaries on the all-local card.

The house was good for a gross gate of $4819.32, only a few hundred dollars short of the last Jackson-West gate. The net sum was $3432.90.

Kendall Sweeps Basketball Twin Bill

Rommey, W. Va., Dec. 8.—Kendall School of Washington, D. C., swept a doubleheader over the West Virginia School for the Deaf here tonight.

The Kendall boys won, 42-28, with Dixon scoring 28 points. The Kendall girls were 32-18 victors.

Pirates Send Frank Gustine To Cubs for McCullough

By Jack Hand

Minneapolis, Dec. 8 (AP).—Pittsburgh swapped Third Baseman Frank Gustine and Pitcher Cal McLish to the Chicago Cubs today for Catcher Clyde McCullough and Pitcher Cliff Chambers in a major deal that should help both clubs.

No cash was involved in the trade, which overshadowed all other business at the official opening of the annual convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. In these days of inflation, the over-the-counter price on the four players probably would approach $200,000.

Gustine, a 28-year-old Pirate regular and McCullough, who is 31, are the two established major leaguers in the deal. It was a "natural" for Pittsburgh badly needed a first string catcher with extra base power and Chicago was so desperate for infield held that Outfielder Andy Pafko was drafted to play third for the 1948 cellar team.

Gustine Best of Lot

Off their 1948 performances, Gustine is the better buy. He hit .268 in 131 games while McCullough batted only .212 in 68 games. Gustine, always a great spring hitter, was up among the leaders in May and June but faded with the hot weather. McCullough was No. 2 behind Bob Scheffing most of the way and even took a seat behind Rookie Rube Walker in the Cubs' youth experiment.

Actually the two pitchers may be the key to the success of the trade. Chambers, a 29-year-old rookie southpaw, won only two and lost nine for Chicago last summer. However, he was a 24-game winner for Los Angeles in 1947 when he had a better record than Bob Chesnes who did so well for the Pirates last summer.

McLish is a former Brooklyn Dodger farmhand who went to Pittsburgh in the big trade involving Kirby Higbe in May of 1947. With Indianapolis in 1948, McLish won 12 and lost 9 for a pennant winner. He had a 4.13 earned run average and walked only 57 men in 172 innings. At one time Branch Rickey was very high on McLish, a 23-year-old Oklahoma boy who appeared in 23 games for the Dodgers during the war year of 1943.

Most of the major league clubs were involved in trade discussion in what looks like one of the busiest meetings in years. Many deals now being concocted will be announced at the major league meetings in Chicago next week.

C. U. Thumps Wilson, 54-43

Fred Conner, of C. U., and Lolly Kirschner paced the teams with 14 points each.

The Cards rang up a fast 16-9 lead at the end of the first period, and then held the Owls to three foul-shots for the remainder of the first half, which saw C. U. lead, 31-12.

Continuing the scoring parade, Catholic, paced by Conner and Jack Walsh, went ahead 41-21. The Cards' second team came in, only to have the Owls push back to 48-36. Back came the regulars to stop the rally.

GW Wins Over VPI Easily, 54-37

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Six hundred and four George Washington faithful turned out to herald their team's first home Southern Conference game last night at the Armory, and the Colonials rewarded them with an easy 54-37 victory over Virginia Tech.

Maynard Haithcock and Phil McNiff were G. W.'s standouts. Haithcock controlling the rebounds off both backboards, and McNiff leading the Colonial scoring with 12 points.

The win was G. W.'s first in two Conference games, and boosted the Colonials' over-all record to 2-1. The loss was Tech's second straight against three victories.

In a preliminary, the G. W. Freshmen defeated Anacostia High, 48-31. Wally Warner, an Anacostia graduate, and Dave Close were top scorers for the Frosh with 12 points each.

Game Site Undecided; Series May Be Extended

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Maryland, which wants to go big time, and Navy, already that way (ask Army), will resume football relations in 1950.

The Terrapins and Middies will clash September 30 at a site to be agreed upon later, Capt. Howard Caldwell, USN, the Navy's new athletic director, said yesterday. It will be their first meeting since 1934.

Captain Caldwell made the announcement after a conference with Jim Tatum, Maryland athletic director, and head football coach. Captain Caldwell became the academy's sports chief Tuesday when Capt. Tom Hamilton decided to accept the athletic directorship at Pittsburgh.

"We are very pleased to have Maryland on our football schedule again," Captain Caldwell said. "We enjoyed our past relationships and look forward to another interesting series."

Trying to Extend Series

Although the 1950 game is the only contest contracted for to date, Captain Caldwell said "there is a good chance that the game will be played in 1951 and other years, too. We can't sign any contracts beyond 1950 because of previous commitments, but we hope to switch our schedule around to continue the Maryland game."

Getting Maryland on Navy's schedule is quite a feather in Tatum's hat. He has plugged for the game since he came to Maryland from Oklahoma two years ago.

Maryland and Navy have played 12 football games' with the Sailors winning all except one, the 1931 game in Washington. The following year the game was held in Baltimore. All others were played in Annapolis.

Denmark Winner

Navy-Notre Dame In Baltimore Again

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 8 (AP).—The Navy-Notre Dame football game will continue next year to be the "big" game in the East for the Irish, with Baltimore the locale, according to the plan of the new Academy athletic director.

Capt. Howard Caldwell said today there is only one hitch to staging the game in Baltimore again. Baltimore is in a dither over rebuilding its stadium after the voters approved only half of the five million dollars requested.

"This keeps us on the limb the same as Notre Dame," Caldwell said.

Caldwell added "we have Notre Dame booked for Babe Ruth Stadium next season." The game is scheduled for October 29.

Return of the game to Baltimore is unprecedented in Navy-Notre Dame relations. In the past they have alternated between the East and the Midwest. But the tilt now is being built as replacement to the Notre Dame-Army classic in New York, which was terminated in 1946.

Redskins Grab Trojan Star Who Nearly Wrecked Irish

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The Washington Redskins came up with a "sleeper" player yesterday when they reached a 1949 agreement with Halfback Jack Kirby, Southern California's offensive ace in last week's stunning 14-14 tie with Notre Dame.

Kirby was signed as a free agent. All 10 teams in the National Football League ignored him during last December's draft meeting. If they considered him at all they thought he was ineligible for the draft, having another year of college eligibility ahead.

It was brought to the Redskins' attention that Kirby's war service actually made him eligible for the N. F. L. draft after last season. They contacted him immediately after the Notre Dame game, finally settled terms yesterday.

Kirby is a 5-foo -11-inch, 185-pounder. He carried the ball 56 times for Southern Cal this year, gaining 249 yards and scoring 30 points. He hung up the Trojans' only touchdown against California, and tallied two of the three touchdowns that beat UCLA, 20-13.

The big, blond star, however, really reached his peak against Notre Dame. His club was expected to lose by at least four touchdowns, but it was Kirby who started the Trojans goalward when the Irish were leading, 7-0. He intercepted a pass, ran it to the Irish 42, then took a 20-yard pass from Dean Dill to Notre Dame's 18.

Near the end of the game Kirby started the scoring march that gave U. S. C. a 14-7 lead that came within seconds of accounting for one of the biggest upsets of all time. A superhuman bit of running was good for 15 yards, giving U. S. C. a first down on Notre Dame's 31. From there it scored handily, clinching the tie despite an Irish comeback in the final seconds.

According to Braven Dyer, Los Angeles Times sports writer, Kirby "was the outstanding offensive back on the West Coast this year."

He was injured early in last year's Rose Bowl game, which was watched by Redskin Owner George Marshall.

He is the second offensive halfback signed by the Redskins this week. On Monday they obtained the '49 services of this year's No. 1 draft choice, Bob Goode of Texas A. & M.

Truman Bowl Game Loses Its Name

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

It didn't take a crystal ball to make it crystal clear yesterday that the "Truman Bowl" hasn't nearly the chance of success as the man of the same name.

In fact, out of the maze of yesterday's developments, it was learned that if the game is played at all it won't even be called the Truman Bowl.

On Monday, Al Lockhart, 30-year-old field manager of the U. S. Automobile Association, said he was heading a group that planned a postseason game at Griffith Stadium January 1 between an all-star pro team and an all-star college team.

It was to be called the Truman Bowl and Lockhart said then, "If the President permits the use of his name, we'll be very happy. If he doesn't, the game will be played under a different name."

Yesterday the somewhat harassed Lockhart came up with a few more "ifs," but insisted that the game still was on:

1. "If we get permission from the All-America Conference to use its players;

2. "If we find a suitable, worthwhile charity;

3. "If Baltimore or Washington will allow us to use a stadium."

Yesterday, too, the Washington sponsors applied for use of the Babe Ruth Stadium in Baltimore. Robert Garrett, chairman of the board, said the application would be given "careful scrutiny and investigation" before reaching a decision.

Eddie Eynon, secretary of the Nats, reported that Griffith Stadium would be unavailable because work on seeding the field already is in progress and has to be finished by Christmas this year and every year.

A White House press attache said it was the first he'd heard of the Truman Bowl and he was quite sure nobody had broached the subject officially.

Director Lockhart originally planned to have Paul Brown coach the pro team, made up of All-American Conference players. Lockhart said he had acceptances from Buddy Young of the New York Yankees; Bob Chappius, Brooklyn Dodgers; Marion Motley and Otto Graham, Cleveland Browns.

College coaches invited were Maryland's Jim Tatum, Yale's Herman Hickman and Ed Hurt of Morgan.

Yesterday, Walter Driskill, general manager of the Baltimore Colts, read paragraph four of an All-America Conference player contract. It stated that participation in exhibitions depends upon written permission from a player's club and the Commissioner.

Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, head man of the All-America, was in New Mexico yesterday and O. O. Kessing, deputy commissioner and treasurer, talked to The Washington Post from New York.

Kessing said, "I haven't heard anything about the game. Unless it's a bonafide offer and all our owners are in favor of it, it would be turned down."

Kessing then turned to Anthony J. Morabito, San Francisco owner who was in his office, and reported the Forty-Niner boss gave the proposal his emphatic "no."

Kessing then added, "I'm sure nobody will go for it."

Although Lockhart said, "I'm not going to say anything until I'm ready to give something definite," he called back in 20 minutes with a lengthy statement yesterday.

In part, it read: "We learned that President Truman has been forced to turn down indorsement of the predicted 'Truman Bowl' planned to honor him with the dedication to his great election victory because of White House rules which prohibit indorsement of charitable projects other than Red Cross, Polio Drive and Community Chest.

"Our game will not be called the 'Truman Bowl' although it is our intention to retain all other features of the original formula. If the obstacles which could be expected in any such short-term promotion can not be overcome, we will abandon the project for this year.

"If we do stage the game, it will be staged along the lines of the high-class promotion which originally was outlined in our prospectus. If not, we will announce immediately our abandonment of the project."

Lockhart said other members of the game committee include Windy Wallace, law student and New York Yankee scout; Rick Roberts, Pittsburgh Courier sportswriter, and J. E. Coward, restaurant owner.

Filly Ends Losses at 13, Pays $78

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 8.—W. B. Hill's Gay Rocket, unable to reach the winner's circle in 13 previous tries this year, proved there are days and races. Today was her day and the sixth event was her race for she came through with a stretch drive that gave her victory in a blanket finish of the featured Carter Purse.

Gay Rocket not only won the photo decision by a head margin but she also survived a claim of foul. After the "official" was lighted her scattered backers gathered at the pay-off windows to collect an across-the-board mutuel of $78, $21.80 and $9.20.

Track Was Heavy

Gay Rocket led F. Shenski's Flash Up and Hugh Elliott's Friend Or Foe into the wire in the test of about seven furlongs. The winner was clocked at 1:33 4/5 over a strip still termed "heavy" but threatening to improve, barring more rain.

The objection against Jockey Frank Law, who rode Gay Rocket, was lodged by Jockey Lou Lombardi, who finished fourth with E. L. Poston's White Easter. Lombardi maintained Gay Rocket carried him wide entering the stretch. The stewards, however, failed to concur.

It was quite a horse race, at that, with the theme being chasing Gay Rocket for the most part. The filly hopped to the front early and Law kept her going despite numerous challenges. At the finish, Gay Rocket had a driving rival on either side of her but she just refused to give up.

Two Jockeys Suspended

Stewards announced today that Jockeys Eddie Ballenger and Webb Snyder have been suspended for the remainder of the meeting for incompetent riding in yesterday's last race. The officials did not comment on those rulings.

The winner of that race was A. August's Sticky Fussy which paid $6.80. Ballenger was aboard John Bosley, jr.'s Ayah's Boy while Snyder rode Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Glacial Run. These well-played horses went into a head and head battle for the lead out in front of the field. They appeared to run each other into submission, finally stopping and being out of the money in the mile and a quarter event.

Today's daily double paid $32.20 on the 5-4 combination, Woodburn Farm's Fire Power, saddled by Earl K. Auld of Washington won the opener at $4.40 and Mrs. H. B. Donegan's Old Fellow took the second at $6.80.

Caruso Triumphs

'Green' Navy Basketball Team Beats P.M.C. in Opener, 48-30

Clinite's 14 Points Top Tars Attack

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 8 (AP).—Navy trounced Penn Military College, 48-30, in a typical opening game basketball scramble today.

Coach Ben Carnevale's "greenest" Naval Academy five in years won the first contest on its 21-game schedule with little difficulty, but both sides found the basket an elusive target.

Dick Clinite's 14 points for Navy led the scoring. The 6-foot-4 substitute center pitched in five field goals and four of his seven free-throw attempts.

The Midshipmen led all the way and were never in a critical position. In the second half PMC pulled up within 11 points at 37-26, but got no closer.

A total of 42 personal fouls and 2 technicals were called as each club tried to smooth over the ragged edges in its first outside competition.

Art Shires Denied Habeas Corpus Writ in Murder Case

Dallas, Dec. 8 (AP).—Art (the Great) Shires, former major league baseball player charged with murder in the death of W. H. (Hi) Erwin, was denied a writ of habeas corpus today.

Justice of the Peace W. L. Sterrett dismissed the habeas application saying there was no need for a hearing since charges already had been filed. Shires is free on $5000 bond on the murder charge.

As a result of the dismissal, details of the fight between Shires and Erwin, a former minor league player and umpire, were not disclosed in court.

Shires, whose turbulent big league career made the headlines in the late twenties and thirties, declined to discuss the affair.

However, City Detectives H. O. Pope and H. C. Holloway said witnesses told them Shires walked into Erwin's cleaning and pressing shop while the latter was talking over the telephone to his mother.

The witnesses were quoted as saying Shires picked playfully at Erwin and said something to him. Then, Erwin retorted something which the witnesses did not hear and Shires slapped him. Erwin then struck Shires across the face with the telephone receiver and a fight followed.

The witnesses said Shires returned to the shop later, chased the witnesses out of the shop and when they returned they found Erwin, who had been lying on a bed, on the floor.

Gravedigger's Tale May Save Convict

Gulembo

The gravedigger, 24-year-old Herbert L. Gulembo, said he was afraid he might "go haywire" if he kept silent and let an innocent man pay for his crime.

A red-haired unemployed lodger in a mission for destitute men, Gulembo babbled out a tale of lust and murder over a barroom telephone early today. Then he repeated it at police headquarters.

He said he beat to death Mrs. Kathryn Mellor, 43, a Philadelphia writer and artist, in her apartment last spring, when she rebuffed his attempts to make love to her. Then he fled the city, fearful that he might be called upon to dig her grave.

Police were trying to determine if Gulembo's story was the product of a drink-befogged mind, prodded by newspaper accounts of the crime.

If he is telling the truth, it may save a 19-year-old Philadelphia Negro, Bayard J. Jenkins, from electrocution.

Jenkins, an iceman, was convicted November 23 of murdering Mrs. Mellor in her apartment June 7. During the trial, he denied confessing that he killed the woman. The death weapon was described as a war souvenir shell.

Run Under Fire

Two Sought For Yoke Robberies

Police yesterday issued a lookout for a pair of yoke artists believed to have yoked and robbed two men during the night.

The yokers escaped from one of the robberies in a blaze of police gunfire and may heve been wounded.

The first victim was John Tardiff, 30, of 1500 21st st. nw. He was seized from behind by a man at about 11:40 p. m. at 21st st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Tardiff told police the yoker was accompanied by two other men. He said he was robbed of a $75 watch and $12 in cash.

About an hour later Richard G. Axt, 24, of 1410 26th st. nw., was grabbed from behind and thrown to the ground by two men in the 1900 block of S st. nw.

They took his wrist watch, valued at $25, and then were frightened off by the approach of Pvt. William I. Hart of the Third Precinct. Hart fired three shots at the men as they fled east on S st., and then north on 19th st.

Police said one of the men in the second robbery was a light-skinned Negro of about 21 years, about 6 feet 2 and 170 pounds, wearing a brown overcoat and tan hat.

Diogenes Club Honors Truman on Election

The Diogenes Club yesterday presented its first annual award to President Truman, who confounded the public opinion polls in the November 2 election.

"Mr. Truman was honored for having "thrown light" on the state of public opinion when "alleged experts were stumbling around in the dark."

Conscientious Policeman Delves Deeply Into Case; Firemen Have to 'Undelve' Him

"I'm going to get to the bottom of this case," declared Police Pvt. Andrew M. Keady with a show of determination at 5:12 a. m. yesterday.

He did—but it took the fire department rescue squad to get him out.

Keady and his partner in scout car 22, Pvt. Benjamin F. Howze, both of the Second Precinct, received a call to investigate a prowler in the rear of the Metropole Cafe, 1018 14th st. nw.

A Seeming Corpse

They found a man sprawled at the bottom of a pit, an airshaft 16 feet deep. He appeared to be dead.

While Howze went to call the rescue squad, Keady decided to investigate further. He droped to the bottom of the pit.

The man presumed dead wasn't. When Keady started to go through his pockets, the man stirred. Keady solved the case when he found two bottles of whisky.

It then occurred to Keady that he was trapped himself. He had to wait for the rescue squad and a ladder to get out.

Just a Pitfall

The man at the bottom of the pit was identified by police as Hugh Christopher Criddle, 40, of 1110 L st. nw. There was no explanation of how he happened to fall in the pit. He was held for investigation.

As police were leaving the alley, they came upon another man. They took him along, too, and booked him for investigation. He was identified as William Arthur Kidwell, 21, of 2604 Military rd. nw.

Some time later, the owner of the Metropole Cafe informed police that somebody had tried to break into the restaurant through the ventilation shaft. The ventilator hood had been pulled off and the blades of the exhaust fan bent.

The President of Cuba is accompanied by Dr. Miguel Suarez Fernandez, president of the Cuban Senate; Dr. Lincoln Redon, president of the House of Representatives; Carlos Hevia, Minister of State and Gen. Genovevo Perez Damara, Chief of Staff of the Cuban Army, all of whom were guests at the dinner.

E. Herbert Clay, Nephew of Berlin Commander Weds

The ceremony was simply arranged, owing to the illness of the Greek Premier who was to have served as best man.

Reds Discover "Alice"

Of Ministers, Ambassadors And Home-Grown Caviar, La Pons and 'Kosti', Too

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PRACTICALLY every day and/or night there's a diverting "do" at the French Embassy. Tuesday's after-concert reception for Diva Lily Pons was especially nice. Diminutive Miss Pons, who's transformed her familiar brunette hair to almost platinum blonde, changed her dramatic lace cascaded stage dress to a bebustled taffeta numero for the occasion. Absorbing more spotlight than Lily was her mother, who remained seated serenely in a chair, looking charmingly matriarchal with a scarf of delicate black lace laid tightly across her fashionable coiffure. Mme. Pons, who has lived in New York since the war, seldom accompanies her daughter on out-of-town engagements, came here solely because of the embassy reception. At the concert, down center beside "Kosti," Lily's husband, she kept a critical eye on daughter. An old hand at music, her husband was an organist. Mme. Pons never missed a nuance. Among the cosmopolites greeting the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet (who had attended three different functions that day, achieving a costume quick-change between each) and Miss Pons and her mamma, were four Ambassadors and their handsome helpmates, Chilean, Ecuadorian, Norwegian, Turkish. A spate of press sipped champagne, ate truffled galatine of chicken and pate de fois gras, miniature eclairs and Napoleons. Mrs. Raymond Clapper was especially expensively streamlined in sapphire blue awash with crystal beads.

The General Knows His Wheat

NUMEROUS slightly lower echelon diplomats, generals and banking biggies filled in embassy crannies, and among interesting personalities—nowadays too seldom seen in these parts—were Mrs. Warren Austin, the Herbert Feises (Mr. Feis is wintering at Princeton's fabulously brainy school of advanced thinking), and Montana's Gen. Thomas D. Campbell. General Campbell is perhaps this country's greatest wheat-growing expert. Back in the late twenties and early thirties, the general, then plain mister, was invited to Russia as economic adviser and wheat consultant, had frequent sessions with Stalin. During the war General Campbell participated in the North African campaign and visualized the area's great wheat-growing potentialities. Within the past week he's returned from a survey of Morocco, Tunisia, Algeria. To demonstrate his methods effectively the general invited a number of crack Arab farmers to visit his enormous ranches at Harding, Mont., and near Albuquerque, N. Mex. The general's daughter, Libby, lived in Washington during the war, had a wide circle of friends.

Russian Corner—The Soviet Embassy's bought a block of seats for one of the weekend performances of "Alice in Wonderland." The play, a successful repeater, is staged by the Children's Theater of Washington at the Roosevelt Auditorium (tickets at Kitt's!), acted by kids, with exceptional costumes and with settings derived from the Tenniel drawings. Ip Russia, oddly enough, "Alice" is quite a favorite but always played, it's said, by kids. Laurence Steinhardt, a former Ambassador to the USRR and present envoy to Canada, dropped down recently, reported extremely happy in his new post, partly because he's discovered a man who keeps sturgeons! Caviar, as we lucky ones know, comes from those handy fish whose habitat is the Black Sea and such inflowing waters as the Volga, Danube. The Ambassador, quite a sturgeon-egg connoisseur, claims the Canadian article to be the real McCoy, promises a batch you-know-where at inaugural time. The Tolstoy Foundation is brooding over plans for a monster or, rather, profitable benefit entertainment in the near future. This department's suggestion: Ask Mme. Kasenkina to be guest of honor. As an attraction, the spunky schoolteacher would out-Dietrich Marlene, out-Chiang Meiling. However, she's still too ill to travel.

The Bitten Hand Hits Back

MURIEL DRAPER, a stellar guest at the Soviet Embassy's October Revolution Function last November 7, is now sounding off in Budapest at the Women's International Democratic Federation Conference. Chairman of the American delegation, Muriel states the Congress of American Women is having a tough time here. "It's been placed on the subversive list by the notorious Attorney General, Tom Clark. Our members are losing their jobs, are being dragged before investigation committees, threatened with imprisonment and deportation." Claiming C. A. W. telephone wires are tapped and its mail scrutinized, she continues: "Hostility to the Soviet Union is initiated by reactionary militarist elements in our Government with the help of the monopoly press, radio, film and other propaganda." She finishes with a snappy summary of the ghastly life we live: Lynchings, beatings, life imprisonment—as "the form fascism is taking in its attempt to control America." It's interesting to note that aging Muriel, who pursues her furies on a comfortable income supplied by her dancing son, Paul Draper, made a single, brief visit to Russia and never returned. Surely it would be better for Muriel to live out her days in her favored land rather than return to a depraved country where, according to fugitive Russian wives, hot plates have to be used for dinner, jewelry has to be pawned when husbands lose their jobs and where culture has reached the vanishing point because theater tickets are unobtainable.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Erstwhile Exceedingly Affectionate Husband Is Cold to Wife Who Formerly Shunted Aside His Inopportune Lovemaking; Is He Pouting?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Until a few months ago my husband had a very affectionate demonstrative disposition. But now his treatment of me is impersonal and I realize that I brought this on myself by telling him not to bother me with his lovemaking when I was busy preparing a meal or trying to get my housework done.

He still kisses me on leaving for work and coming home, but this is only a matter of routine, as he readily admits. And when I try to make a fuss over him nowadays, he tells me not to bother, as he is either reading or he is "tired." Knowing how he will react on this score now, I feel like a stranger to him, instead of his wife.

Has his love for me vanished? Or is he trying to get even with me for not always accepting his lovemaking in whatever circumstances he happened to offer it in the past? How can I make him understand that his latterday attitude is keeping us from having a complete and happy marriage? Please help me. C. R.

Man Lacks Competence in Managing Emotions

DEAR C. R.: From the viewpoint of fidelity to justice in human relations, it isn't strictly true that you brought your husband's resentful coldness upon your head, due to failure to accept his lovemaking in whatever circumstances he happened to offer it in the past.

Very possibly his aloof indifference nowadays is a by-product of your "don't bother me" attitude in times when you felt sure of his wholehearted allegiance; but even so, the essential significance of his behavior, then and now, is that he lacks understanding and psychological competence for managing his emotions appropriately.

To explain: Appropriate management of one's emotions requires, above all, that one doesn't visit them on another in proprietary demanding ways, with primary accent on self-gratification. In marriage especially, and as applied to lovemaking, it requires cooperative considerate regard and real respect for the partner's whole personality, keyed to humorous acceptance (if the partner says so) that there is a time to cook, and a time to sweep, and still other more opportune times to celebrate conjugal unity.

Thus your husband's moods of fond exuberance in times past, which often collided with counter-demands on your attention, by no means imposed upon you a sentimental obligation to drop skillet or mop and respond in kind. Rather, reasonably viewed, the conflict of interests (from your angle) emphasized need for, and lack of, appropriate restraint on his part.

Treatise May Spark Man's Will to Learn

OBVIOUSLY, however, he didn't see it that way. He felt your preoccupied rebuff to be a disparaging rejection of his whole personality, and he elected resentfully (either unconsciously or deliberately) to "teach you a lesson," "get even," etc.—and this preoccupation with revenge is as grossly selfish as his prior preoccupation with "lovemaking" was.

His indifference to your contrition suggests that he may be flirting with someone else, as many childish husbands do "in retaliation" when their own shortcomings vex the wife; but if so, that is more symptomatic of his emotional distortions than a problem in itself, and it will evaporate without trace if he has capacity to grow.

At best, his love is childish; and as yet it belongs to you. His kisses, grudgingly labeled "routine," are proof of that. He cares for you, dependently, but it's problematic whether he will ever mature into an emotionally adult spouse.

For advice: It isn't possible to "make" anybody face his faults and overcome them; but perhaps by sharing this article with your husband, you might kindle in him a realization that he is far off the beam of right thinking, right feeling and right acting, whereupon he may choose to work his own way up to constructive self-management. M. H.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Paternal Jealousy

"You know," said the young mother, "I believe my husband is actually jealous of the baby. He has been acting very strange and I don't know how else to explain it."

Very few people can imagine that a father could possibly feel jealous of his own new-born child. And yet such a thing happens quite often. Nor is it so unnatural when you stop to think of it. The young husband has been pretty much the center of his wife's attention during the early months of marriage. They have done all sorts of things together. Then a child is coming and, too often, the prospective mother can think of nothing but the coming event. After the birth she is even more concentrated on the youngster and has little time for the things she and her husband used to do together. It takes a pretty mature male not to feel some twinges at least and many of us do. Usually it's only temporary unless we have a deep need for a lot of affection and then it may be harder to handle.

It's a good idea for husband and wife to talk things over together. Sometimes just the fact that his wife understands what he is feeling and doesn't blame him for it, helps most. New mothers would be wise not to concentrate 100 per cent on the junior member of the family.

A Lesson in Poise

Practice Won't Make Perfect Unless You Know the Right Way

By Ida Jean Kain

ANY GAL WITH brains wants to be pretty glamorous at the holiday season. Glamour is essentially beautiful movement, so let's get in a bit of practice in poise. True, you've been sitting down in chairs, getting up, and picking up dropped gloves for some years now . . . but practice doesn't necessarily make perfect.

The stage setting is a full-length mirror or, if one isn't handy, the dressing table mirror will do. You're the leading lady. First of all, lift that bump of self-esteem on the top of your head. If you're 5 feet 5 inches tall, remember the movie star's tip and make it 5 feet 5¾ inches! Whatever your height, stretch it three fourths of an inch.

At ease, girls, don't let shoulders be elevated too—that makes for stiffness and awkward movement. Keep shoulders relaxed. Make believe a string is attached to the crown of your head and another to the top ribs, and center the lift through the midriff and on up through the top of your head. Now walk toward the mirror.

In that perfect posture you can hardly get off on the wrong foot, but let's check it. Walk with upper legs close together—no straddling, and toes pointed straight ahead. The swing is from the hips . . . a smooth, glamour-gown movement.

In walking downstairs, the first rule is don't look down at your feet. Experts say to suspend one foot over the step as you bend the other knee and ankle, lowering yourself to the step. Or walk slightly to the side in order to see the steps without actually looking at them. Remember—it's holding your head high and your back straight that makes for regal bearing.

There is a neat trick to walking upstairs beautifully. Keep hip muscles contracted . . . and never let hips trail! Keep back straight, head up, hips firm and use the thigh muscles to climb stairs smoothly.

Practice Sitting Pretty

PLACE a chair in front of the mirror at an angle to get a side-front view. Walk toward the chair, turn around and, without looking down, touch the chair seat with the back of one leg. Using the powerful muscles on the front of the thigh, lower smoothly into the chair—keeping hips tucked under, back perfectly straight. Nice-That's the way it's done on the stage.

The wrong way to be seated is to lead with the posterior, bending forward and slumping at the waist. It's old and it's awkward.

To rise from a chair, again use only the thigh muscles. Don't bend forward or get shoulders out of line. Keep a perfectly straight line from base of hips to top of head.

Ah . . . the gloves resting on your lap have dropped to the floor. Do not bend over stiff-legged to pick them up. On second thought, do—but watch in the mirror to get the full effect. On stage, only Joan Davis would bend over that way.

The graceful way is to place one foot slightly ahead of the other, keep back nice and straight, head up, bend your knees, and pick up the gloves. Done that way it doesn't make your face red!

Your Baby

Youngster's Slow Speech Is Natural

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

DURING the years when speech is developing, all children speak hesitantly. Parents expect halting speech when the baby is beginning to say words, but by three years they feel he has mastered speech and they are alarmed when he begins to stutter. Nervousness about his speech and their efforts to end stuttering increase the child's self-consciousness and tendency to stutter.

In "Speech Handicapped School Children," by Johnson, Brown, Curtis, Edney and Keaster (Harper & Bros.) they have this to say about stuttering:

"Practically all stutters are originally diagnosed by laymen, not speech specialists. They are usually diagnosed by the parents, more often than not the mother being the first to be concerned.

"What these laymen, these parents diagnose as stuttering in chiefly 100 per cent of the cases and solely in 90 per cent, is the simple, easy apparently unconscious repetitions of words and syllables which we know to be characteristic of childhood speech.

"The average age at which children come to be diagnosed by their parents as stutters is about three years. It is to be considered that this is approximately the age at which the average child begins to talk enough to call attention to what he is saying and how he is saying it.

"Until then most parents are pleased that he is 'learning to talk,' but at around the age of 3 he 'has learned' as the parents sense it and he must henceforth be reckoned with as a speaker. Speech standards, as the parents define them, are then applied, the child is judged and if found wanting is so evaluated.

"Stuttering, as originally diagnosed in the young child, is decidedly different from well-developed stuttering in the adult.

"It becomes apparent that parents should expect uneven speech in any child and not tag it stuttering and then by exaggerated concern, nervous worry and self-conscious attention to it, actually promote and intensify it."

Knowing that all children do stutter intermittently while speech is being solidified should make it easy for a mother to turn deaf ears to it instead of making the child repeat, stopping him and in other ways impressing him with his temporary habit.

Take 25 Recipes and Ad Lib

Learn How What Does Which And You'll Be a Better Cook

By Cynthia Lowry

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (AP).—Scratch a Russian dressing and you'll find a tartar sauce.

All the world of cookery is just one big happy family, near and distant relatives of a mere handful of "basic recipes."

This should be happy news to the bothered bride worrying over her first baking-powder biscuits. It should deflate some of the haughty chefs who whip up gustatory delights in deepest secrecy.

Home Economist Martha Stewart Tupper puts it more formally: "All recipes stem from scientific cooking principles—the relationship of liquids, fats, leavening agents, heat and such. It's hard to realize that when you see all the cook books and read all the recipes. But each one of these can be traced directly back to one of those few basic formulas."

Mrs. Tupper, home economics director of a food research firm and former college instructor, estimates the number of basic recipes at 25. Colleagues, however, have broken them down to as few as 15. Whole books have been written about each one of these family trees.

Making New From Old

LET'S show how this works.

Take bread as a basic recipe. Bread is a mixture of flour, liquid, seasoning, fat and a leavening agent.

Well, if you substitute margarine for butter, that's a new recipe. If you stick to butter but use water instead of all milk, that's a new recipe (it's also French or Italian bread).

Four main types of change make the family tree of cookery grow like the green bay tree (a member of the laurel family frequently used for seasoning).

Says Mrs. Tupper:

1. Add some new ingredient—like raisins—to your classic bread recipe. Result: A new recipe.

2. Change the size or shape of your product—and it's a new recipe. (Mrs. Tupper developed a new one the other day simply by baking muffin batter in cornbread stick pans.)

3. Change the method of cooking, keeping all other things pretty constant. Look what happens if it's custard: Baked, it comes out a solid; cooked in a double boiler, it's soft.

4. Substitute one ingredient for another. This isn't as simple as it sounds and involves some knowledge of food chemistry. A wise cook—or one who is following a printed recipe—can turn out excellent muffins by substituting orange juice for milk. But someone, either the wise cook or the creator of the recipe must know that orange juice is slightly acid, which means some adjustments must be made in the baking powder. And don't think you can just substitute a cup of corn sirup for a cup of sugar and get away with it.

Most Women Know

MOST women know, intuitively or from study or experience, about many of these things, Mrs. Tupper maintains. Most women who have "special dishes" are really experimental cooks, developing new recipes in their own kitchens.

But a little knowledge of food chemistry helps a lady a lot in her kitchen. Then she knows why she should cook peas for the shortest length of time (to keep the color from disappearing) and why a little apple cooked with red cabbage keeps the ruddy color intact. (Something about acidity.)

Everyone is aware that French dressing must be shaken before using. That's because it's an emulsion. So we add an egg, and the egg stabilizes the emulsion. That's mayonnaise. Then add a little chili sauce to this, and it's Russian dressing, lineal descendant to the original oil, vinegar, salt, pepper and what-not of the classic salad dressing.

This sort of thing goes on and on, from category to category. Sometimes the ancestry of a production is a little obscure. Like pie crust. Is the ancestor bread—or is it white sauce? The ingredients are fat, flour, liquid and seasoning. Take your choice.

Oh, yes, the basic recipes as Mrs. Tupper sees them. Here they are: cereals, quick breads, popovers, muffins, biscuits, doughnuts, yeast breads, cookies, cakes with fat, sponge cakes, pastry, custard, cornstarch puddings, sauces and gravies, salad dressing emulsion, gelatine salads and desserts, sugar, sirups, candy and frosting, coffee, tea, cocoa, meat, fish and poultry cooked with moist heat, meat, fish and poultry cooked with dry heat, vegetables, fruits and food preservation (canning, pickling, smoking, et al.).

Glamour Boy No Favorite Dinner Guest

ARE glamour boys going out of style? It appears that they are. At least the modern American woman would not invite any of the current crop to dine with her family.

Contrary to what you might expect, comparatively few women are interested in a great-lover type of dinner companion. Not one made the list of the top nine favorites in the Woman's Home Companion poll on "Who's Your Favorite Hero."

When the Companion asked their 2,000 women reader-reporters to name the one person of the present or past, they would most like to invite from Socrates to Shirley Temple. However, Americans—eight men and one woman—led the field. Those who won the greatest number of votes are, in the order of their popularity, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln, Will Rogers, Eleanor Roosevelt, General Eisenhower, Bing Crosby, Benjamin Franklin, Mark Twain and George Washington.

One of the women stated she would like to have dinner with Stalin and ask him just what he is looking for. Another would like to ask Abe Lincoln how to deal with Stalin.

On the lighter side, there were a number of intriguing choices. A Westerner voted for Klondike Kate—"I'm getting fed up with politics and serious talk." From the South a woman voted for Lot—"to find out his reaction when he discovered his wife had turned into a pillar of salt." And another woman writes that she would like to invite Emily Post—"to see if she practices what she writes."

How to Prolong Life of Scuffs

You mentioned once a product to use on the soles of washable scuffs to prolong their wear. Where can I buy it? A. G.

The suggestion we made was to dip the scuffs in a heavy laundry starch solution to give the soles added stiffness and increase the wear.

Some members of my family cannot always be home on time for dinner. Is there any utensil on the market in which I can keep food, such as potatoes and vegetables, warm for a certain length of time?

A READER.

There is a new vacuum bowl, available in housewives' sections, made especially for this purpose. Or, you could place the food in the top of a double-boiler with gently boiling water in the bottom. Small, oven-proof, covered dishes could also be used. Place the food in them and set the covered dish in a large pan which has an inch or so of hot water in it. The water in the pan can then be kept warm by placing in the oven or setting it over a burner which is turned low on top of the stove.

Is there any solution to remove perspiration stains from silk crepe? Is there any way to restore color and pliancy to such spots? M. V. G.

Sometimes the color can be returned to perspiration stains by dampening them and holding them in the fumes from an open bottle of ammonia. If this doesn't remove them, try sponging with vinegar. To soften the spot, dampen with water and sprinkle powdered pepsin over the stain, working it well into the cloth. Let stand an hour or so, keeping the spot damp. Let dry and brush off the powder and rinse well.

I have two very beautiful feathered hats, last year's, but almost new except they need a little freshening up or cleaning. I have tried most all large houses, but none seem to clean feathered hats. If possible, may I have the name of someone who does clean them. If not, how could I do it? A. J.

I, too, have not been able to find a firm which cleans feathered hats. You may be able to freshen them yourself by sprinkling dry cleaning powder into the feathers and then brushing it away. Or, you could moisten corn meal with carbon tetrachloride and dust it into the feathers. When it has had a chance to absorb the soil, brush it out. Be sure to use a soft brush and brush with the feathers. If the feathers are the type which curl, they can be re-curled by holding them in the steam from a boiling kettle.

How can I remove lipstick which my young nephew rubbed into the rug and on an upholstered chair? M. M.

Place clear vaseline or colorless shortening on the stain and rub until the lipstick is worked into the fat. Now, sponge with a cloth dampened with carbon tetrachloride. If all of the stain isn't removed the first time, rub more fat into it and repeat the entire process.

I have a living room suite covered with a corded velvet material. Each piece is of a different color, namely, blue, gold, and rose. The material has shown no signs of wear, but has become very faded and drab. Is there any way the color could be restored?

I know of no way to restore the color of velvet upholstery on the furniture.

I am very anxious to obtain the June, 1936, issue of Better Homes and Gardens magazine containing the article, "Day Beds —By Day and Night," by Christine Holbrook. Could you tell me where to obtain this copy? I have tried local book stores that handle back numbers of magazines, but none have any as old as this. M. C. P.

The Central District of Columbia Library at 8th and K sts. nw. has a June, 1936, issue which you can use either at the library or take home. They are holding the copy for you in your name. If you wish to own a copy of that issue you may be able to purchase one by writing to the publishers in Des Moines, Iowa.

Dear Bill:

About these bus speedometers:

Just because it's been customary to connect speedometers to the transmission doesn't mean there is no other way of doing it.

Taxi meters, for example, have been connected with the front wheel to prevent running up the fare on slippery days. (Don't laugh. My dial showed 18 miles one icy day on a trip from 18th and F nw. to the District line and Rhode Island ave.).

A short, flexible cable can be geared to a single throw worm attached to a front brake drum. I'll take the designing job for a reasonable fee.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Hiss Escaped Wallace's Purge

By Drew Pearson

By a queer quirk of fate, Henry Wallace, when Secretary of Agriculture, fired a group of liberal employes because some of them were supposedly too left-wing. But though in the group, Wallace did not fire Alger Hiss, now charged by Whittaker Chambers with giving out secret State Department documents to a Communist agent.

Wallace

Hiss was assistant counsel for Wallace's Agricultural Adjustment Administration and had written an opinion that triple-A benefit payments for curtailing the cotton crop should go to sharecroppers as well as to landlords. This caused a lot of criticism in the South.

Other clashes of opinion occurred between triple-A lawyers and top Agriculture Department executives regarding the milk-marketing code and the meat-packing code. Some of the young AAA attorneys and consumer representatives were vigorous in opposing both Wallace and Chester Davis, then AAA administrator.

Among those purged were Gardner Jackson, so hated by the Communists that he was beaten up in New York by a Communist agent; also Fred Howe, a Woodrow Wilson Democrat; and Frank Shea, who later occupied a position of importance in the Justice Department. But Hiss was not purged, even though he wrote the sharecroppers' opinion.

However, he was subjected to such criticism by his associates for remaining on the job that his old friend, Felix Frankfurter, now Supreme Court Justice, then professor at the Harvard Law School, telephoned Gardner Jackson asking that the critics lay off. Hiss had been a protege of Frankfurter's and had been recommended by him for a job in Washington.

Gouzenko Revelation

ABOUT A MONTH later, Hiss transferred briefly to the Justice Department, then to the State Department, where he served under Francis Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State. Sayre had been a professor at Harvard Law School when Hiss was a student there. Many of the secret documents which have turned up in the possession of Wittaker Chambers, the former Communist agent, were marked as from the office of Assistant Secretary of State Sayre.

When Igor Gouzenko, the Soviet code clerk in Canada, exposed the Canadian-American spy ring to Canadian authorities, he revealed that the one Soviet contact was either an Assistant Secretary of State or an assisant to an Assistant Secretary.

Hiss was investigated at that time. There was nothing conclusive about Gouzenko's identification, however.

Army Copies Navy

WHILE THE NAVY and Air Forces are spitting at each other over Secretary Forrestal's shoulder, Gen. Omar Bradley, Army Chief of Staff, has been willing to take a tip from the Navy in training troops. He has also taken some suggestions from Senator Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts.

As a result, more raw recruits will be trained by warrant officers, fewer by commissioned officers.

The new policy came about partly because of an inspection trip by Gen. Willard Paul, Chief of Army Personnel, who liked the way the Navy was training troops at its Great Lakes Training Station. He reported back to General Bradley that the Navy, using warrant officers, was doing just as good a job as with young commissioned officers—possibly better.

Simultaneously, Senator Cabot Lodge, a reserve lieutenant colonel, wrote Bradley a friendly letter about his two weeks' training at Camp Hood, Tex.

Anxious that the Army do a good job in handling 18-year-olds, Lodge stressed the need for good young officers, both commissioned and noncommissioned. He suggested that the Army use great care in ordering reserve officers back to active duty for fear they were not properly qualified. It's better for the Army to be shorthanded, Lodge urged, than call up a lot of officers who are inadequate.

Bradley, more anxious than anyone else that the Army's new, difficult training program succeed, appreciated the Lodge suggestions, took them up before a group of his corps commanders. They decided, as the Navy already had, that in many cases sergeants and warrant officers would be better for troop-training than young lieutenants. Noncoms, therefore, will be used not merely as drill-masters but in increasingly important subcommands.

Presidential insiders are convinced that the man President Truman ultimately wants as Secretary of State is Chief Justice Fred Vinson. . . . President Truman is still having trouble finding his clothes and other things after they were moved across Pennsylvania Avenue to the temporary White House. "It's what always happens," he said the other day, "when someone else does the moving for you." . . . Warren Austin, much-loved American delegate to the United Nations, who has just undergone a serious operation, will resign by January. . . . Albert Fitzgerald, head of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (largest CIO left-wing union), is negotiating to swing over to the right, deserting his pro-Commie followers. Mme. Chiang Kai-shek has asked Secretary Marshall to increase military and economic aid to China by about ten times. In return, Madame Chiang says, the Chinese are willing to have their government and army run by American advisers — lock, stock, and barrel. . . . The key exhibit that may unravel the whole Chambers-Hiss mystery is an old, ramshackle, typewriter on which some of the secret documents were written. Herbert Hoover's Commission on Government Reorganization will take a dig at Chip Bohlen, one of Secretary Marshall's most intimate advisers. . . . An accidental leak from the Cominform now reveals that Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia double-crossed Moscow once before. It's now disclosed that Tito was sent by Moscow to Yugoslavia in 1941 as a contact man only, with strict orders not to try for any of the top jobs in postwar Yugoslavia. However, Tito ignored orders, and presented Moscow with an accomplished fact, just as he has now. . . . There is a standing Kremlin order to knock off Tito at the first opportunity.
